ST. LOUIS NEEDS MORE SCHOOLS, SAYS DR. JUDD

Summary of Survey of System Here, Made Under His Supervision, Is Given Out.

EQUIPMENT EXCELLENT

Report Favors More Facilities in Elementary, No Curtailment in High Schools.

Dr. Judd's View on Crowded Condition of Grade Schools

REGARDING the crowded condition of the grade schools in St. Louis, Dr. Judd, in his survey report, says:

"St. Louis averages larger classes in the grades than the other cities of the class to which it belongs. Indeed, it may be doubted whether anywhere in the country there is a more crowded condition in elementary classes than in the city of St. Louis.

"The reduction which is effected in elementary schools by crowding children into a single classroom is very great. Salaries being moderate and classes being very large, the net result is a cheap elementary school. There is no possibility of large economies in the elementary schools."

A summary, by Dr. Charles Hubbard Judd, director of the School of Education of the University of Chicago, of the recent survey of the St. Louis public school system under his supervision, which was filed with the Board of Education a week ago, was made public by the board today, in support of the board's campaign for a $3,000,000 bond issue for school buildings. This bond issue will be voted upon at a special election, Nov. 11.

All departments of the local school administration were investigated during the survey and the recommendations of leading experts of the country in this work are contained in Dr. Judd's summary.

Dr. Judd says the school buildings of St. Louis are finer and more costly than in most cities and that more is spent for their upkeep and operation. In equipment they excel schools in most cities.

Behind in Building.

"It is impressively evident," he says, "that the city has fallen behind in recent years in its building program and must in the immediate future take energetic steps to provide space for school activities. St. Louis must build more schools at once.

"There can be no doubt that the new buildings ought to fall in no respect behind the excellent buildings which have been erected during the last 15 or 20 years.

"The arguments which can be presented in favor of excellent buildings are too obvious to require more than a passing summary. The economy in future costs, the advantage in preserving the health of the children and the good example to the homes of the community are all reasons for building as good schoolhouses as can be erected. The ornamentation of school buildings is not a financial waste, and it is in the aggregate a small item."

From the point of view of the survey, Dr. Judd points out, judgment regarding financial policy can only be sound when it is based on the broadest consideration of instructional efficiency.

System Well Organized.

The investigators found that the school system is well organized and efficient, and its central offices more completely organized than most school systems, yet a more complete organization and an extension of supervision are urged.

In operating expenses the system is high in certain particulars, but in the main inexpensive and below the average of its class. The high schools are expensive, the cosmopolitan type of organization which has been adopted being of the most costly form. It aims to provide a very wide range of courses and to duplicate the whole program in each section of the city, resulting in the cost being high as compared with the elementary schools.

Whether or not the high schools should provide such elaborate courses of study cannot be discussed in a survey, Dr. Judd says. The problem is a social and economic one and must be solved by the citizens in view of their willingness or unwillingness to provide higher education in the high schools.

The tendency to provide higher education at public expense is growing greater every day, Dr. Judd says, and in many cities and states college courses are provided. He says it seems probable, from a study of the general movement, that St. Louis will provide greater rather than less opportunity for higher education in the development of the schools.

The reason for the comparative low cost of operation in the elementary schools, Dr. Judd finds, lies in the fact that the schoolrooms are overcrowded and the salaries paid the teachers are moderate.

In reviewing this condition he says

FIFTH BARNARD GRADUATE IS MARRIED BY CONTRACT

New York Lawyer Dictates Document to Bride and It Is Witnessed Before Supreme Court Justice.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Marriage by contract appears to be in vogue with graduates of Barnard College. Already five of its alumnae have followed this course. Miss Pauline Cahn of 202 Riverside drive was the fifth to adopt this short cut to matrimony. When she and Arthur S. Levy, attorney, decided to marry, the bridegroom said: "Sit down at the typewriter, Pauline, and take a little dictation."

As she pounded the keys, the lawyer dictated the following:

"We agree by the terms of this contract, executed at 501 Chambers street, before Supreme Court Justice Lehman, to enter into marriage relations and take each other for husband and wife."

After a few more legal phrases, which were duly recorded by the bride-to-be, the contract was signed and witnessed before Justice Lehman. The bride and bridegroom at once departed for a honeymoon in Bermuda.

DOGS ARE USED AS SENTINELS

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Ward Price, in a dispatch to the London papers from Saloniki, refers to the use of dogs as sentinels by the Bulgarians. He says they are sheep dogs, alleged to be descendants of the war dogs of Alexander the Great.

The Bulgarians chain the dogs all day, and at night feed them and let them loose. At the slightest unusual sound they set up a yelping that can be heard for miles.

WITNESSES TELL OF WRECKING OF CRUISER MEMPHIS

Declare That Little Wind Accompanied Great Waves in Santo Domingo Harbor.

BLAME UNDERSEA SHOCK

Earth Disturbance Was Felt Preceding Day at Dominica, British West Indies.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Vivid descriptions of the marine phenomenon which caused the destruction of the United States armored cruiser Memphis, with the loss of 40 of her crew in the harbor of Santo Domingo, Aug. 29, were given today by witnesses of the disaster who arrived on the steamer Iroquois. The conjecture that the disaster was the result of an undersea eruption was strengthened by assertions that nothing resembling a gale accompanied the sudden disturbance.

The theory that the big seas which tossed the 15,000-ton warship on the rocks were caused by an undersea shock transmitted from a disturbance on the preceding day at Dominica, British West Indies, was advanced by Capt. Theodore de Booy of the American Indian Heye Foundation, an eyewitness of the catastrophe. This theory, said Capt. de Booy, is borne out by the fact that Dominica lies east-southeast of Santo Domingo and the seas threw the Memphis in a west-northwesterly direction ashore.

"The strange phenomenon," he said, "was absolutely new to the experience of all who beheld it, including the natives of the island, accustomed as they are to outbursts of tropical storms. It had been blowing a hurricane from the southeast for two days, but on the morning of Aug. 29 the sea was calm and there was no wind. Then the sea became suddenly turbulent. The roadstead became an angry mass of foaming waves in which no small craft could live.

"As the fury of the disturbance increased, the Memphis was seen to be dragging her anchor and gradually being driven ashore. Finally a wave that seemed larger than any that had preceded it lifted up the warship held her on its summit for a moment and then dashed her down on a submerged reef within 200 yards of land. From the after ventilators of the cruiser was pouring a cloud of steam. Immense waves were still breaking over her, some of them as high as the tops of her funnels, and the Memphis was shoved inshore until she was only 50 yards out. An improvised breeches buoy was put in operation and the men on the wrecked ship were brought ashore, some of them terribly burned from the explosion of her boilers."

Admiral Pond Reports Boilers Burst on Memphis.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Full details of the recent wreck of the armored cruiser Memphis in Santo Domingo harbor, just received at the Navy Department from Rear Admiral Pond, show that two of the cruiser's boilers burst before she was thrown upon the rocks by the tidal wave. Earlier reports had indicated that breaking of a steam pipe crippled the ship and caused the large number of injuries among members of her crew.

Of the 40 men who lost their lives in the wreck, 26 were on board a launch swamped while returning from shore with the ship's baseball team. Five other men were drowned in a launch lowered after the explosion.

Negro Fireman of the Memphis to Be Buried in Arlington.

BOSTON, Sept. 9.—James H. Townsend of this city, a negro fireman of the armored cruiser Memphis, who was killed at his post when the Memphis was overwhelmed by a tidal wave in Santo Domingo harbor recently, is to be buried in Arlington Cemetery with full honors, Surgeon-General William C. Braisted of the Navy notified Mayor Curley today. Only one other negro member of the army or navy is buried at the National Cemetery, it is understood.

GUARDING BORDER AND MEXICAN EXPEDITION COST $70,000,000

It Takes $15,000,000 a Month to Defray Expenses of Regular Troops and Militiamen.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—It is costing Uncle Sam about $15,000,000 a month to keep 100,000 state troops and 45,000 regular army troops on the border and in Mexico. Expenditures to date total more than $70,000,000. It is estimated that a further expenditure of $50,000,000 will have to be made.

It will cost close to $1,000,000 to bring the 15,000 state troops now en route from the border to their home stations to be mustered out. It will cost a similar amount to move 15,000 state troops southward to replace the men ordered home. This exchange of troops will continue until the 20,000 odd men still remaining in the state mobilization camps are sent to the border to do their share of patrol duty.

PARKBUSING IS NEWEST PASTIME IN THE CITY

Many Persons Making Circuit Several Times on Auto Vehicles Running in Forest Park.

There is a new and popular outdoor pastime in St. Louis. It is parkbusing.

Parkbusing is done in this wise: You go to the De Baliviere entrance to Forest Park. You wait until one of the new double-deck buses comes along and you board it. You make the complete circuit for which your fare entitles you and then you pay another fare and make another circuit. And so on, da capo al fine, as they say (or do they?) at the band concerts.

Park Commissioner Cunliff said today that the sport is especially favored by unescorted women and women with children who visit the park in the daytime. They find it a pleasant and economical way of passing the time. Occasionally boys indulge in the practice. The commissioner says he observed one group of boys which made the circuit six times.

While parkbusing is fine for revenue purposes it sometimes works an inconvenience to persons who cannot get a ride because the buses are filled. The commissioner said he hoped some of the riders would remember this, especially when the park is well attended, and try to give others an opportunity for a trip.

Only one bus is run on week days and it has seats for 54 passengers. On Sundays and holidays three buses are run.

CENTRAL AMERICAN COURT ALLOWS SALVADOR'S CLAIM

Republic Complained Against Nicaragua Concerning Treaty With U. S. for Naval Base.

SAN SALVADOR, Sept. 9.—The claim of the Republic of Salvador against the Government of Nicaragua concerning the treaty between the United States and Nicaragua for the establishment of a naval base in Fonseca Bay by the United States has been allowed by the Central American Court. The members for Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras and Salvador voted in favor of Salvador's claim and the Nicaraguan member voted against it.

Salvador appealed to the Central American Court on the ground that its right had been infringed by the Nicaraguan treaty for the establishment of a naval base in Fonseca Bay. The appeal was filed Aug. 18. Previously, Costa Rica had made a similar appeal to the court, and on May 5 last the court ruled in favor of Costa Rica. Nicaragua has announced that it will not accept the decision of the court in the matter of the protests of Salvador and Costa Rica.

MUSTERING OUT AT NEVADA EXPECTED TO BEGIN NEXT WEEK

Army Officers Believe First and Third Missouri Regiments Will Soon Return Home.

NEVADA, Mo., Sept. 9.—If the opinion expressed by officers here proves correct, members of the First and Third Missouri Infantry will probably be sleeping on real beds and taking nourishment at real tables before the end of this month at their homes in St. Louis and Kansas City.

It was said at the Government reservation here that the mustering out of the two regiments which were returned this week from Laredo, Tex., probably would begin the first of next week and be completed within two or three weeks. This opinion was based on a semi-official telegram received from Maj. Charles Miller, who is in charge, stating that the regiments would be mustered out and that he would reach Nevada Monday. Maj. Miller was chief of the staff of mustering officers who were here when the guard was mobilized. The message was taken to mean that Gen. Thomas H. Barry, commanding the central department of the army had instructed Maj. Miller to proceed to Nevada and take up the work of mustering out the First and Third at once.

ECONOMIST TO VOTE FOR WILSON

Republican Likes President's Golden Rule Methods in Solving Problems.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Roger W. Babson, well known as a writer on economic subjects and a life-long Republican, announced today that he will work for the re-election of President Wilson.

"It is because Mr. Wilson seems more interested than Mr. Hughes in the moral side of such questions as banking, shipping, railroading, tariff, labor and relations with other nations that I now intend to vote for him in November," said Babson.

"I am for Mr. Wilson because I believe that he has tried to apply the Golden Rule to solving great national and international problems."

SON OF KERENS UNDECIDED ON WILL CONTEST

Richrd C. Jr. Gets an Income of $500 Monthly From Estate of His Father.

OTHER BROTHER CONTROL

Decision Whether Testament Is to Be Attacked Will Be Left to an Attorney.

Richard C. Kerens Jr., who, under the terms of his father's will is to receive an income of only $500 a month for life from an estate valued at several million dollars, this afternoon told a Post-Dispatch reporter he had not made up his mind whether he would make a contest.

He is at the family home, 36 Vandeventer place and said he had been "camping there" alone, except for a few servants, for several months.

"I have not had an opportunity to study the will," he said. "The matter is in the hands of Nathan Frank, who I consider more my personal friend than my attorney. He will decide what shall be done about the contest, and I shall be guided by his advice.

Trying to Regain Health.

"I have not seen the will and my only knowledge of it is what I have read in the newspapers. I am seeking to regain my health and money matters really have little interest for me."

He said he was suffering from nervousness and that he never had recovered from a mastoid operation which he underwent four years ago.

Kerens said he knew nothing of any action to contest the will by his brother, Vincent. He said that Vincent and his wife had been reconciled for several years and were living together. This fact had not been generally known.

The will provided $500 a month income for Vincent, but qualified the bequest with a provision that $450 a month must be paid to Vincent's wife out of that sum.

"Vincent and his wife are living at Shelter Island, L. I.," Kerens said, "and I know that for a time they lived together in a New York apartment. Their relations are amicable and they attended my father's funeral here together.

"They called with my sister, Mrs. Colket, and we had tea together. We did not discuss the will. They called again yesterday, shortly before returning East."

Brother to Control Estate.

Kerens said he could not discuss the provision of the will under which Vincent will get control of one-third of the estate, after bequests of $550,000 are made, if he shall be able to show that he has been sober and that his behavior has been good for five consecutive years.

"The will is a very important document," he said, "and I could hardly discuss it until I had studied it carefully."

Kerens died last Monday at Mrs. Colket's home near Philadelphia. He was Ambassador to Austria-Hungary during Taft's administration.

NEGRO, SENTENCED FOR 99 YEARS, PARDONED BY MAJOR

St. Louis Murderer Had Been Keeping His Lawn; Other Prisoners Get Clemency.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 9.—Gov. Major today granted a full pardon to John Davis, a negro sentenced in St. Louis for 99 years, on Dec. 1, 1903, for murder in the second degree.

Davis for many years has been caring for the lawn and garden about the Governor's mansion. His faithfulness and industry caused Mrs. Major and the Governor's family to become interested in his case.

Sick paroles were issued to Thomas Foust, Camden County, sentenced in 1913 to serve 15 years for murder; Ike Love, St. Louis, sentenced in 1912 to serve 15 years for murder, and William Barry, Jasper County, sentenced in 1915 to serve 10 years for robbery.

TARGETS HIT AT 20,000 YARDS

New Record Reported for Battleships Pennsylvania and Oklahoma.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Sept. 9.—The superdreadnoughts Pennsylvania and Oklahoma, recently commissioned, returned to Hampton Roads yesterday from target practice at Tangier Sound, Chesapeake Bay. Reports were that the warships made several hits at 20,000 yards, the longest range ever attempted by any ship in the American navy.

The battleships Wyoming, Minnesota and Michigan also are said to have made excellent records, leading in successful hits.

SHARKS ATTACK JAPANESE

TOKIO, Sept. 10.—Sharks are raiding the coast of Japan as they have been the eastern coast of the United States. Bathers have been warned to be on the lookout.

A Japanese girl swimming off Hyogo was attacked by one of the monsters, who caught her left leg in its jaws and, after tearing off the flesh, disappeared. The girl was rescued and will probably recover.

24-HOUR TIE-UP OF INDUSTRIES IN NEW YORK PLANNED

Central Federation Considers Project of Helping Out Street Car Employes.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Union labor leaders of national and State prominence were called into New York's transit situation today with the announcement by local strike organizers that within 24 hours a conference would be held here, the outcome of which might be a 24-hour tieup of all the city's industries employing men affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

A telegram was sent to Samuel Gompers, asking him to hurry here and the Central Federated Union announced after an all-night meeting that a committee had been empowered to call a general sympathetic strike in all trades, if such action was considered necessary to help the employes of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co. and New York Railways Co. to win their fight for annulment of the so-called "master and servant" contracts binding the men not to ask for wage increases for two years.

Meanwhile, it was announced on behalf of the Interborough that applications would be made to the courts for injunctions to restrain labor leaders from interfering with men operating the subway, surface and elevated lines.

Police reports indicated that underground and elevated service was normal today and that the situation on the surface lines affected had considerably improved.

John P. Riley, president of the District Council of the International Longshoremen's Association, said he had instructed the 1800 members of the Tidewater Boatmen's Union not to handle barges laden with coal for the Interborough Rapid Transit Co.'s power houses. The order, Riley claimed, will hamper, if not entirely stop the Interborough systems.

OHIO MINE SUPERINTENDENT KILLED IN $12,000 HOLDUP

Two Men Fire on Him in Roadway and Bullets Stop Chauffeur Who Tries to Escape.

MARTINS FERRY, O., Sept. 9.—Stepping out of the shrubbery along the roadway at Glen's Run, three miles west of here, two men killed Lee Rankin, superintendent of the Florence Mine of the Youghiogheny & Ohio Coal Co. took the mine payroll of $12,000 from Rankin's automobile and escaped. Posses are in pursuit.

Paul Pickens, a chauffeur for Rankin, attempted to save the payroll by speeding up the machine after Rankin had fallen out with four bullets in his body, but a shot from one of the bandits stopped him.

ATTACHMENT OF AUTO REVEALS RISK COMPANY SALE

Springfield (Ill.) Men Now Control Bankers' Accident of East St. Louis.

W. C. Goodall, president of the Guardian Insurance Co., in East St. Louis, today had a Constable attach the automobile of his brother, J. A. Goodall, former secretary of the Bankers' Accident Insurance Co.

The attachment suit disclosed that the Bankers' Accident Insurance Co., which has its home office in the Metropolitan Building in East St. Louis, has passed from the control of the local men who directed it. Edwin F. Smith succeeded Silas Cook as president, Ira J. Bell succeeded J. A. Goodall as secretary, a Mr. McRea succeeded Albert Diehm as treasurer and Ralph Smith, son of Edwin F. Smith, and W. E. Bell, son of Ira Bell, succeeded W. P. Launtz and John Wies as directors.

W. C. Goodall was ousted as president of the company a year ago by a faction of the directors led by his brother. He filed an injunction suit, charging that J. A. Goodall, Launtz, Cook and Wies planned to dispose of the company to Smith and his associates, and divide the surplus of $20,000 among them. The company is a mutual one, and the surplus belongs to the policy holders. Judge Vandeventer held there was no evidence to show any such intentions, and said, in his opinion, that the defendants were "honorable men." He dissolved the injunction.

The J. A. Goodall faction later completely ousted W. C. Goodall and his faction by a quo warranto proceeding. W. C. Goodall has appealed both these cases.

Cook told a reporter the new officers were from Springfield, Ill. He wasn't sure whether the change was made on Aug. 31 or Sept. 1. J. A. Goodall refused to discuss the change in management.

The Bankers' Accident Insurance Co. was organized nine years ago, and virtually all the policy holders live in East St. Louis. It has several hundred members.

Edwin F. Smith has been connected with a number of insurance companies in Illinois and Pennsylvania.

221 Firms Holding Them, Department of Agriculture Is Told.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Two hundred and twenty-one firms are holding nearly 5,000,000 cases of eggs—about 143,000,000 dozens, or 1,716,000,000 eggs—in cold storage, according to the latest report to the Department of Agriculture.

Great as the figures may seem, the official reports show them 10 per cent less than a month ago.

TROOPS OF FIVE NATIONS FIGHTING IN EAST RUMANIA

Bulgarians' Turks and Teutons Battle on One Side While They Are Opposed on the Other by Forces of the Rumanians and the Russians.

Orsova, an Important Town Above the Iron Gates, Is Lost by the Forces of the Austrian Army.

French and British Take Offensive on Somme Front; Paris Tells of Capture of 7700 Germans in 6 Days.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Bulgarian, Turkish and German forces one one side, and Russian and Rumanian on the other, are battling today along a 70-mile front in Dobrudja, Eastern Rumania, from the Black Sea to the Danube.

Bulgar and Turk troops, advancing along the Black Sea coast, have occupied Baltjik and two other seaports, Sofia reports, and the fortress of Dobritch, or Bazardjik, 50 miles southeast of Bucharest, has been taken by a combined Bulgar-German force. The armies of the central Powers have not yet crossed the Danube, all reports agree.

The Rumanians continue their offensive in Eastern Transylvania and also have occupied the important town of Orsova, on the Danube, above the Iron Gate. Advancing from Csik Szereda, in Transylvania, north of Kronstadt, the Rumanians are driving westward and Vienna admits the withdrawal of Austrian forces before attacks against Hergitta.

The Russians on the northern end of their line near Riga have commenced a new undertaking and have crossed the Dvina north of Dvinsk. Repeated efforts by the Germans to dislodge them, Petrograd declares, have been unsuccessful.

The Russians also have again instituted violent efforts to break over the mountain barrier which separates them from the Hungarian plains. Petrograd says they have stormed a series of heights in the Carpathians south of Baranoff. In the direction of Halicz, in Galicia, below Lemberg, heavy fighting continues.

Berlin reports are that the Bulgarians and Germans are beating down all opposition in Eastern Rumania and have advanced about 50 miles north of the Bulgarian frontier along the Black Sea Coast.

Both the French and British took the offensive on the Somme front last night, although their operations were confined to relatively small areas. The French War Office reports the capture of a small wood east of Belloy. It says 7700 Germans have been captured since Sept. 3 and that a great number of German dead were found after the unsuccessful counter attacks of the Germans yesterday. The attack of the British was made in the vicinity of High Wood, where London announces a trench was captured.

There has been no infantry action on the front in Greek Macedonia, but the artillery duels have continued along the Struma and in the region of Lake Doiran.

British Capture German Trench in High Wood.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The British captured a German trench in High Wood on the Somme front after a sharp fight last night, it was announced officially today. German troops made several attacks during the night, but none of them in force. The statement follows:

"Last night there was some sharp hand-to-hand fighting in High Wood, where we captured a German trench, taking two officers and 30 Bavarians. In this operation heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy.

"There has been considerable hostile artillery activity against our front north of Pozieres and in the neighborhood of Moquet Farm. In this sector small hostile infantry attacks were easily repulsed. A detachment of the enemy which attempted to advance from the direction of Courcelette was stopped by our fire.

"Our troops carried out several successful enterprises in the neighborhood of Arras and Hohenzollern redoubt and north of Neuve Chapelle. The enemy's trenches were entered, some prisoners were taken and other casualties were inflicted.

Germans "Invite" Greeks to Quit Town They Control.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—A dispatch to the Havas News Agency from Athens, dated Friday, says the German commandant has "invited" the Greek authorities to quit Florina, where the Greek administration will be suppressed.

Florina is on the railway in Northwestern Greece and about fifteen miles southeast of Monastir, Servia.

French Advance on Somme Front in Night Attack.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Renewing their assault on the Somme front last night, the French made a further gain. The capture of a small wooded area is reported today by the War Office. German attacks in the Verdun sector were repulsed.

The Servians on the Macedonian front took the offensive last night in the region of Lake Ostrovo. The War Office announced today that after a violent engagement they captured a height west of the lake.

Russian Report Tells of Fight With Turks and Teutons in Galicia.

PETROGRAD, via London, Sept. 9.—German and Turkish troops are engaged in stubborn fighting with Russian forces in Galicia on the River Naraluvka, in the direction of Halicz, according to the official statement issued today by the Russian War Department. A counter-attack made by the Turks and Teutons, the statement adds, was repulsed by the Russians.

In the Carpathians, south of Baranoff, the Russians stormed a series of heights. They took 500 prisoners, the announcement says, and captured a mountain battery of several cannon which had been thrown into the ravines.

Russian torpedo boats, it is declared, bombarded the Rumanian port of Baltjik, on the Black Sea, and sank 21 barges in which the Bulgarians, who had accupied the seaport, were shipping bread.

Efforts of Russians to Advance in the Carpathians Thwarted.

BERLIN, Sept. 9, by wireless to Sayville.—Renewal of violent Russian attacks in the Carpathians is reported in the official Austrian statement of Sept. 6. It is said that except for some small advantages the determined efforts of the Russians to advance were thwarted.

East of Zlochoff, in Galicia, 40 miles east of Lemberg, the Russians attacked, after heavy artillery preparation. They were repulsed by the Austrian artillery fire.

Berlin Admits Teutons Yielded Before Russians in Carpathians.

BERLIN, via London, Sept. 9.—Forces of the central Powers in the Carpathian Mountains northwest of Kapul, says today's official report issued by the German General Staff, yielded yesterday before the pressure exerted by the Russians.

In Galicia between the Zlota Lipa and the Dniester, the statement says, Russian detachments which penetrated the Teuton trenches were driven out again by counter attacks, and on the front in Galicia occupied by Turkish troops more then 1000 Russians were taken prisoner.

Anglo-French infantry attacks on the river Somme in France slackened yesterday, says the official statement issued today by army headquarters staff. A British attempt to advance at Foreaux Wood (High Wood) and night attacks by the French against German positions in the Berny-Deniecourt sector were not successful, the statement says.

MECCA APPARENTLY HAS BEEN RECAPTURED FROM THE REBELS

Berlin Dispatch Tells of Proclamation Issued by New Grand Sherif of Holy City.

BERLIN, Sept. 9, by wireless to Sayville.—"The new Emir of Mecca, Sherif Althaidar Pasha, has issued a proclamation severely arraigning the former Emir," says the Overseas News Agency. "The proclamation says that the central Powers never desired soil of Islam."

Early in June the Grand Sherif of Mecca, chief magistrate of the Holy City, proclaimed his independence of Ottoman rule, and his supporters soon captured the Turkish garrisons at Mecca and several other important points in West and Central Arabia. Except for the foregoing dispatch, there has been no intimation that the Turks have been able to displace the Grand Sherif who led the revolt.

Text of the President's Speech to 4000 Women

Predicts Suffrage Triumph Soon

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 9.—Following is the full text of President Wilson's speech delivered here last night, before 4000 women, under the auspices of the National Woman Suffrage Association:

I have found it a real privilege to be here tonight and to listen to the addresses which you have heard. Though you may not all of you believe it, I would a great deal rather hear somebody else spreak than speak myself, but I should feel that I was omitting a duty if I did not address you tonight and say some of the things that have been in my thoughts as I realized the approach of this evening and the duty that would fall upon me.

The astonishing thing about the movement which you represent is not that it has grown so slowly, but that it has grown so rapidly.

No doubt for those who have been a long time in the struggle, like your honored president, it seems a long and arduous path that has been trodden, but when you think of the cumulating force of this movement in recent decades, you must agree with me that it is one of the most astonishing tides in modern history.

Two generations ago, no doubt, Madam President will agree with me in saying it was a handful of women who were fighting this cause. Now it is a great multitude of women who are fighting it.

Goes Into History.

And there are some interesting historical connections which I would like to attempt to point out to you. One of the striking facts about the history of the United States is that at the outset it was a lawyer's history. Almost all of the questions to which America addressed itself, say a hundred years ago, were legal questions, were questions of method, not questions of what you were going to do with your Government, but questions of how you were going to constitute your Government—how you were going to balance the powers of the states and the Federal Government, how you were going to balance the claims of property against the processes of liberty, how you were going to make your Government up so as to balance the parts against each other so that the Legislature would check the executive, and the executive the Legislature, and the courts both of them put together.

The whole conception of government when the United States became a nation was a mechanical conception of government, and the mechanical conception of Government which underlay it was the Newtonian theory of the universe. If you pick up the Federalist, some parts of it read like a treatise on astronomy instead of a treatise on Government. They speak of the centrifugal and the centripital forces. And the whole thing is a calculation of power and an adjustment of parts.

When Lawyers Were Needed.

There was a time when nobody but a lawyer could know enough to run the Government of the United States, and a distinguished English publicist once remarked, speaking of the complexity of the American Government, that it was no proof of the excellence of the American Constitution that it had been successfully operated, because the Americans could run any Constitution. But there have been a great many technical difficulties in running it.

And then something happened. A great question arose in this country which, though complicated with legal elements, was at bottom a human question, and nothing but a question of humanity.

That was the slavery question, and is it not significant that it was then, and then for the first time, that women became prominent in politics in America? Not many women. Those prominent in that day are so few that you can almost name them over in a brief catalogue, but nevertheless, they then began to play a part in writing, not only, but in public speech, which was a very novel part for women to play in America; and after the Civil War had settled some of what seemed to be the most difficult legal questions of our system, the life of the nation began not only to unfold, but to accumulate.

When Life Was a SimpleMatter.

Life in the United States was a comparatively simple matter at the time of the Civil War. There was none of that underground struggle which is now so manifest to those who look only a little way beneath the surface. The pressure of low wages, the agony of obscure and unremunerated toil did not exist in America in anything like the same proportions that they exist now. And as our life has unfolded and accumulated, as the contacts of it have become hot as the populations have assembled in the cities and the cool spaces of the country have been supplemented by the feverish urban areas, the whole nature of our political questions have been altered. They have ceased to be legal questions. They have more and more become social questions, questions with regard to the relations of human beings to one another—not merely their legal relations but their moral and spiritual relations to one another.

And this has been most characteristic of American life in the last few decades, and as these questions have assumed greater and greater prominence, the movement which this association represents has gathered cumulative force. So that, if anybody asks himself, "What does this gathering force mean?" If he knows anything about the history or the country, he knows that it means something that has not only come to stay, but has come with conquering power.

Have Seen Visions of Duty.

I get a little impatient sometimes about the discussion of the channels and methods by which it is to prevail. It is going to prevail, and that is a very superficial and ignorant view of it which attributes it to mere social unrest. It is not merely because the women are discontented. It is because the women have seen visions of duty and that is something which we not only cannot resist, but, if we be true Americans, we do not wish to resist. Because America took its origin in visions of the human spirit, in aspirations for the deepest sort of liberty of the mind and of the heart, and as visions of that sort come up to the sight of those who are spiritually minded in America, America comes more and more into her birthright and into the perfection of her development. So that what we have to realize in dealing with forces of this sort is that we are dealing with the substance of life itself.

I have felt as I sat here tonight the wholesome contagion of the occasion. Almost every other time I ever visited Atlantic City I came to fight somebody. I hardly know how to conduct myself when I have not come to fight against anybody but with somebody.

I have come to suggest, among other things, that when the forces of nature are steadily working and the tide is rising to meet the moon, you need not be afraid that it will not come to its flood. We feel the tide; we rejoice in the strength of it and we shall not quarrel in the long run as to the method of it, because when you are working with masses of men and organized bodies of opinion you have got to carry the organized body along.

The whole art and practice of government consists not in moving individuals, but in moving masses. It is all very well to run ahead and beckon, but, after all, you have got to wait for them to follow. I have not come to ask you to be patient, because you have been, but I have come to congratulate you that there was a force behind you that will, beyond all peradventure, be triumphant and for which you can afford a little while to wait.

CONCUSSIONS KILL MANY GERMANS AT GUILLEMONT

Correspondent Says Scores of Bodies Found After Bombardment Were Without Wounds.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—Describing the effects of the British bombardment of the German positions at Guillemont, the correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. at British headquarters in France, says:

"The ground east of the village was strewn with German dead. The corpses in many cases were stark naked, every stitch of clothing having been blasted off them. A very large proportion of these bodies showed no signs of wounds and there is little doubt that the men were killed by the intense concussion. Even in the dugouts with which the place swarmed few men escaped the bombardment and those who did said their nerves were destroyed by the terrific poundings of the British guns."

The correspondent considers it significant that the ground won was not bombarded by German field guns, which indicates, he says, that the Teutons withdrew their field artillery out of range.

LESS CRIME IN WEST VIRGINIA

Fifty Per Cent Reduction Declared Due to Prohibition Law.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 9.—Fred O. Blue, State Tax Commissioner, in a statement made public here, claims that in the two years the State prohibition law has been in effect there has been a reduction of 50 per cent in crime and 75 per cent in drunkenness in West Virginia.

His claims are based on figures received in official reports from more than 50 municipalities in the State.

PRESIDENT RECITES FAVORITE LIMERICK HE MADE FAMOUS

Rhyme Refers to His Lack of Beauty and It Brings Roars of Laughter at Musicale.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 9.—President Wilson threw an audience at a charity musicale into an uproar of laughter last night, when called upon for a speech, by reciting the limerick which he made famous during his first campaign, as follows:

"For beauty I am not a star;
There are others more handsome by far.
My face, I don't mind it,
Because I'm behind it.
It's the people in front that I jar.

The President went to the musicale with Mrs. Wilson not expecting to speak. He was reminded of the limerick, he said, by the request of the man in charge that he stand up and allow the crowd to see his face.

WOMAN PREFERS JAIL TO FARM

Declares, However, That She Loves Husband and Children.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 9.—Farm life may appeal to some folk but jail life seems preferable to Mrs. Agnes C. Adams, 25 years old, who deserted her husband and four children recently rather than stay longer on her husband's truck farm in Jefferson County. Mrs. Adams was arrested by Humane Officer Morton David. Given the alternative of returning to the farm or facing a charge of deserting her children, she replied:

"I won't go back. I love my husband and my children, too," she told Police Matron Davis, "but I simply can't endure life on that farm any longer."

SUFFRAGISTS RAISE $818,800CAMPAIGN FUND IN HALF HOUR

Two Days in October and One in November to Be Observed as Federal Amendent Day.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 9.—Delegates to the woman suffrage convention, apparently pleased with the address of President Wilson last night, today began their final session of the convention with the expectation of completing their work tonight. Among the speakers on the program for the night session are Secretary of War Baker, Herbert Parsons of New York and Raymond Robins of Chicago.

The convention yesterday reaffirmed its policy of nonpartisanship as an organization toward national political parties and defeated by an overwhelming vote an attempt to place it on record as in favor of supporting national candidates who pledge their support to the proposed equal rights amendment to the Federal Constitution.

The convention decided on methods of carrying on its campaign for suffrage. The question of opposing the re-election of those members of the House Judiciary Committee, whether Democrats or Republicans, who blocked the suffrage amendment in committee, was left to the judgment of the association's Congressional Committee.

Two days in October and one day in November will be observed as Federal Amendment days, with demonstrations and public meetings in many states.

A campaign fund of $818,800 was raised in 30 minutes. Most of the money was pledged and the remainder actually contributed. New York pledged $225,000 and Pennsylvania $125,000. A delegate from Massachusetts, said to be a Mrs. Blackwell, gave $10,000, and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the organization, also contributed $10,000. There were other individual gifts from $3000 down to $10.

President Predicts Victory.

Triumph for the woman suffrage cause "in a little while" was predicted by President Wilson here last night in a speech before the convention.

"I have come here to fight with you," the President declared. Immediately the 4000 women present stood and cheered. A few minutes later Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, with Mr. Wilson still present, declared: "We have waited long enough to get the vote. We want it now. I want it to come during your administration." Again the great audience of women stood and cheered, waving handkerchiefs.

The President's pledge of support to the suffrage question caused Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt to say in a speech soon after he closed:

"You touched our hearts and won our fealty when you said you had come here to fight with us."

The President did not speak on the method by which he would bring about woman suffrage, but said: "We sha'l not quarrel in the long run as to the method of it."

Declaring that sometimes he became "a little impatient" over discussions about the channels through which votes for women are to come, the President caused the delegates to applaud by saying: "I have felt here the wholesome contagion of the occasion."

President Arouses Enthusiasm.

Wilson aroused the greatest enthusiasm when he said whenever he had come to Atlantic City previously he had come to fight against somebody, but that on his present trip he had "come to fight with somebody."

The meeting came to an end with the President and Mrs. Wilson standing between suffrage leaders joining in singing patriotic songs.

In his address the President did not mention his previously expressed belief that suffrage should come through action by the states.

At the time the United States was formed, Mr. Wilson said, only a lawyer knew enough to run the nation; but since the Civil War the country has been faced more and more by social questions, and women have more and more taken an interest in public affairs.

"The whole nature of our political questions has been altered," he said.

Speaking of the future of the movement, Mr. Wilson declared that the tide was rising and would come to its flood.

ATTEMPTED REVOLT IN BRITISH SOUTH AFRICA DISCLOSED

Move to Foment Another Rebellion Learned of at Trial of Men Charged With High Treason.

CAPETOWN, via London, Sept. 9.—Details of an attempt to foment another rebellion against the British in South Africa were disclosed at the trial yesterday at Bloemfortein of two Nationals, Van der Merwe and Schonken, on a charge of high treason. The men are alleged to have approached a number of prominent Boers, including Gen. de Wet, to whom they told that large stores of rifles were available and that certain Boer Generals were willing to lead a revolt.

Gen. de Wet, who informed the Government of the movement, testified that he warned the men against attempting another uprising. The hearing was adjourned.

Gen. de Wet, commander-in-chief of the Orange Free State forces in the Boer War, headed a rebellion against the British early in the present war. He was captured, convicted of high treason and sentenced to six years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000, but was released from prison Dec. 21, 1915.

Postal Clerk Soldiers to Get Jobs Back.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—In view of the War Department's order under which 12 regiments of national guardsmen soon are to be mustered out of the Federal service, Postmaster-General Burleson notified Postmasters to immediately reinstate every postal employe in the same position and at the same salary as when he left to enter the military service.

INDEPENDENTS TO FIGHT INCREASE IN COST OF MOVING

Organize Against Demand That They Sign Wage Contract on Hour-Rate Basis.

Twenty-five independent moving and storage men met at the F. C. Baker Storage and Moving Co. warehouse, 2900 Market street, last night, and organized the Independent Moving Association to fight the St. Louis Furniture Movers' Association, which a few days ago announced an increase of 25 per cent in moving charges, following the settlement of the employes' strike.

The St. Louis association, the independents say, is a "moving trust." It is composed of the 22 larger firms. It is alleged that the association, by allowing only a small wage increase to the employes, is attempting to use the employes' union to destroy the independents and hold up the public for increased prices out of all proportion to the wage increase allowed the employes.

The original association members will hereafter charge by the hour instead of by the load, as they have done heretofore, and as the independents want to continue doing. The association members have entered into a contract with the employes which provides for a higher wage scale if moving is done by the load. The union is now demanding that the independents sign this contract. The independents say they will not sign it because it is in the interest of the so-called "trust."

Prefer Union Labor.

The independents say they are not fighting the union. They agreed to terms more favorable to the union than those in the present contract with the big movers. They say they prefer to employ union labor and are willing to pay the union scale, but they are not willing to pay more than is required of the big movers.

In calling the meeting to order last night, D. Keiner of 215 South Fourteenth street, explained that, after the union had entered into a contract with the independents, it entered into a different contract with the big movers, providing for less pay and longer hours and prohibiting moving by the load, with an excess scale of wages as the penalty for those who do. He declared that the plan of charging by the hour would nearly double the cost of moving. He said that the independents could compete with the "trust" only by underbidding.

Keiner said that the independents now move an ordinary household from one second floor to another, using one wagon and two men and charging by the load, for $6, while the cost, if charged by the hour, would be $10.40.

The independents say that notice was served on them yesterday that unless they signed the "trust" contract the union men would be called off and a strike against the independents declared. F. C. Baker, an independent, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that such a notice was served on him by Thomas E Coyne of the teamsters' union.

Longer Working Hours.

The new contract, which the big movers signed, provides that when moving is done on the hour basis, the scale for chauffeurs shall begin at 30 cents an hour, while if it is done by the load or contract the scale shall begin at 42 cents an hour. The new contract calls for a 10½-hour day, while the contract with the independents calls for 10-hour day. Computed by the week, the independents say, their contract, signed before the big movers arbitrated the strike, called for wages of chauffeurs of $20.50 a week, while the new contract provides for only $18.90.

D. Morse, an independent, said that when he asked Coyne why the union charged one scale when the moving was done by the hour and another when it was done by the load, he was told by Coyne: "We want the men to take their own time and let the public pay for it."

Coyne Makes Denial.

The independents elected D. Keiner president and F. C. Baker secretary and treasurer, and appointed Membership and Law Committees. The latter will engage counsel to enjoin the enforcement of the new contract. The 25 independents at the meeting signed an agreement to employ union men, but not to be bound by the hour system.

Coyne told a Post-Dispatch reporter that while the contract with the big companies calls for 10½ hours, it does not mean what it says, because the men are to be paid for only 10 hours. According to his statement the scale of chauffeurs under the new contract would begin at $18, instead of $18.90.

Coyne denies that the cost of moving an ordinary household will be increased from $6 to $10.50. He says the hour system is better than the load system. He denies that he threatened to call off Baker's men and denies that he said he wanted the men to take their own time and let the public pay, but added that he was opposed to the speed system, under which the men were not able to make a decent living. He denies that the big movers dictated the new contract to the union. He declares that the independent contracts are still in force and that if the independents violate them they may look for a strike.

John Morris, 37 years old, a laborer, of 5813 Cote Brilliante avenue, and his nephew, Harry McGrath, a machinist, 21 years old, of the same address, quarreled last night over family affairs. Morris hit McGrath with his fist and the latter used a club on his uncle's head. This morning Morris was taken to the city hospital. He had become unconscious and surgeons found that his skull was fractured. McGrath was arrested.

Four young girls residing in Nina place, responding to a powerful sympathy for the cause of saving the babies in the homes of the poor, forsook their usual pastimes and took up the task of raising money to add to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund. Ruth McBride, far advanced in the art of painting for one of her years, provided and painted two flower pots, and three of her little friends sold them for $6. "The money is given cheerfully," the Post-Dispatch was advised in a note accompanying the remittance, "with the hope that some babies will be benefitted thereby." The pots became the property of Mrs. Gus Weiss and Charles de Pew Jr.

The girls actively interested in this enterprise, all of whom live in Nina place, are: Marcelite Russell, 5899; Margaret Willis, 5877; Ruth McBride, 5900, and Elenore Ayer, 5851.

A decidedly clever vaudeville entertainment, organized in its entirety by six small girls and boys and given at 5789 Westminster place, brought $3 to the babies' relief fund, and at the same time was the vehicle through which genuine pleasure was afforded to an audience of considerable proportions. The children are Jane and Paul Steinberg, Alice Rose and Irving Levi, Leon Weinberg and Elizabeth Heffernan.

"Snow Drops," a sketch, was given for the Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund by children at the home of Ira Brewer, 3435 Chippewa street, and yielded $10.35. The sketch was produced on the attractively decorated lawn and those who participated won frequent and hearty applause from the large audience. Those taking part in the affair were: Viola and Lenora Lambur, Georgia Rourig, Margaret Heinz, Charles Lambur, Estelle Schnagel, Hazel Baulhaufner, Lauretta Rourig, Adele Iluerman and Virginia Alexander. Mrs. C. Lambur and Miss Mildred Kaufman assisted the girls and boys with whole-heartedness and efficiency.

FAIRBANKS "DRY" IN CANADA, "WET" AT HOME, HANLY SAYS

Prohibition Candidate for President Makes Charge in Speech at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—Charles Warren Fairbanks, Republican nominee for Vice President, recently has proved himself a "dry" advocate in Canada and a "wet" candidate at home, J. Frank Hanly, the Prohibition presidential candidate, declared in an address here today, before the departeure of the "Prohibition campaign special" on a month's Western tour.

"The liquor traffic is a commerce which strikes at the very heart of all we hold dear; which debauches men and undermines the very foundations upon which the home rests and imperils the social order and threatens the moral fiber of the community itself," Hanly quoted Fairbanks as saying at Toronto.

"And yet the man who uttered that, in absolute control of a great State convention, refused to permit it to say a word in condemnation of that thing," continued Hanly. "And the national convention that nominated him for Vice President refused to say a word against it.

"Mr. Fairbanks also sent as a delegate to the national convention to represent the city where he lives a wholesale liquor dealer and selected him as chairman and master of ceremonies the day his party notifed him of his nomination to the vice presidency and within a month actually refused to sign a remonstrance against licensing the traffic in his own ward."

CITY CAN FORCE ANY SIGNAL SYSTEM ON POLICE BOARD

Counselor Daues Holds Commissioners Have No Authority to Decide Question.

City Counselor Daues, in an opinion today to George McD. Johns, Superintendent of Fire and Police Telegraph, held that the Police Department could be compelled to accept such signal system as the city provided for it.

The opinion was asked by Johns in connection with the controversy which arose several weeks ago between him and the Police Board. The board, prior to the removal by the Governor of President Samuel B. McPheeters, voted to cancel the contract with the Kinloch Telephone Co. for its police signal system. After Walter D. Thompson, a director of the Kinloch company, succeeded McPheeters as President of the board, the action necessary to put into effect the cancellation of the Kinloch contract was not taken and it is continued in effect.

Action on the matter again was postponed at yesterday's meeting of the Police Board to give members an opportunity to study its details.

Supt. Johns had purchased partial equipment for a municipally-owned system, and argues that under the system he proposes to install the city will save money.

President Thompson, on Sept. 5, asked Superintendent Johns for a detailed explanation of the proposed new system. This was furnished. Yesterday President Thompson asked for the details of the difference in the costs of the two systems. On receipt of this request Superintendent Johns asked Counselor Daues for an opinion.

In addition to holding that the city can compel the Police Department to use any suitable telephone system it installs, Counselor Daues held that the Police Board has no authority to ask municipal officers for an accounting of the cost of apparatus because it involves no cost to the Police Department, and that proper municipal officers are responsible for it.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT SAID TO PLAN TO SUE LONDON DAILY

Newspaper Said to Have Published His Picture in Mistake for That of "Lusitania Pirate."

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The following cable from London is printed by the American:

"Fleet street today is talking over a newspaper mistake which, unless compromised, will be the result of a court action.

"On Aug. 29 last a London illustrated daily printed on its back page a large photograph of a man in yachting dress and with a naval cap. Underneath the photograph was the inscription: 'Captain Max Valentiner,' and over it: 'The Lusitania Pirate. No murderer's face ever seen in the dock was more typical than this. Yet Germany hails it as a hero's. Capt. Max Valentiner, son of the dean of the Sonderburg Cathedral, is the Hun pirate who torpedoed the Lusitania. He looks capable of so dastardly a deed.'

"It now turns out—so the story goes—that the photograph is not that of Valentiner at all, but of Cornelius Vanderbilt, taken some time ago in yachting costume. His brother, Alfred, was one of the victims of the Lusitania.

"It is understood that Mr. Vanderbilt today served the proprietors of the paper with a writ of libel, and that he feels very keenly about the newspaper's characterization of his photograph."

NEW INFANTILE DISEASE THEORY

Scientist Believes It Is Spread by the Mosquito.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The mosquito is declared to be a carrier of infantile paralysis in a letter published today in the New York Medicine Journal by Dr. Charles S. Braddock Jr., formerly chief medical inspector for the Siamese Government. A similarity is pointed out in the spread of the disease with the spread of yellow fever.

"Both diseases flourish in hot weather and cease in cold," Dr. Braddock explains, "owing to the fact that the mosquito, being the carrier of yellow fever, perishes in cold weather, and I believe the same will be found in infantile paralysis."

TWO AMERICAN FIRMS TAKEN OFF BRITISH BLACKLIST

Lord Robert Cecil Says Policy Will Not Be Altered—Will Reply to U. S. Soon.

MAY MAKE CONCESSIONS

Retaliatory Action of Congress to Be Considered in Framing Answer, He Says.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Two American firms and one individual connected with one of these firms were removed formally from the British trade blacklist today, according to an announcement published in the official gazette.

The firms removed from the blacklist are the Electro Bleaching Gas Co. of New York and Niagara Falls, and Gravenhorst & Co., exporters, of New York. Richard Neuhaus of the Electro Bleaching Gas Co. is the individual whose name has been removed.

Lord Robert Cecil, British War Trade Minister, who returned to the Foreign Office today after a vacation, informed the Post-Dispatch correspondent that the reply to the American protest against the blacklist would be ready shortly.

Lord Robert stated positively that the blacklist policy would not be altered by the British Government. He said he was aware of the retaliatory measures adopted by Congress, although he had not a very clear idea of them, being dependent for his information on brief press dispatches. When asked, however, what action would be taken should the United States request the abandonment of the blacklist, he said:

"We could not make an exception of America and apply it to other countries. Should America demand its abrogation—which she has not done—I don't think it likely we would alter our policy."

Will Not Forecast Reply.

Asked if the action of Congress would be taken into consideration in framing the blacklist reply, Lord Robert said it would, but he would not forecast the context of the reply, which he had under consideration today, nor would he state the concessions to be made.

Interrogated as to what extent he considered Germany had been damaged by the blacklisting of certain firms in America, he said:

"It is impossible to consider the blacklist except as a whole. But the blacklisting of these firms in America is of much importance. I can only point to the decline in the value of the mark to show the financial damage done to Germany."

Lord Robert said that certain parts of the American press seemed to be under the impression that the allies were in a great conspiracy to ruin, if possible, the United States. He said:

"There is no such conspiracy. There is no statesman or politician in this country insane enough to want to injure America.

"We are as much dependent on America as on our allies or on any other neutrals. You have only to look at the trade figures to see that. The economic conference had to do with two great questions which will confront the allies after the war.

"The first is that we must meet what we consider the German commercial organization. It will be necessary, therefore, to consider the question of the favored nation treaties. However, it must be borne in mind that, with the exception of this country, which has no tariff wall, all countries have constantly evaded and violated the favored nation clauses.

World-Wide Tariff.

"It will be necessary, therefore, for all nations to consider those treaties and tariff regulations, and the result may be a world-wide scientific tariff. The second question of the Paris conference was that of means for accomplishing both for ourselves and our allies the enormous task of reconstructions."

Lord Robert added that it seemed to be the impression in America that the blacklist would continue after the war. This he denied.

"It is a war measure solely," he said, "and we have taken elaborate precautions to prevent its going beyond the bounds intended or doing needless injury to neutrals. We consider blacklisted firms as enemy firms.

"We have no desire to interfere, nor does the law contemplate any interference, with legitimate trade. However, in the case of a ship accepting a consignment from a blacklisted firm to a South American or other neutral port we have to insist that our nationals at least refuse to supply coal for such a purpose, and I am afraid that a refusal of the United States to permit the clearance of a vessel refusing such a consignment would cause friction between the two countries."

CROWD GATHERS AROUND MILK WAGON, WOMAN CALLS POLICE

Strikers Declare They Are Merely Doing "Peaceful Picketing," But One Arrest Is Made.

Six policemen were sent at 7:30 o'clock this morning to an alley between Geyer and Copelin and Compton and Louisiana avenues, in response to a telephone call from an excited woman, who declared police and striking milk wagon drivers were fighting there.

Upon arrival the policemen found 16 strikers about a Pevely wagon. They declared they were "peacefully picketing" it. Two men and a policemen were in charge of the vehicle. They said the strikers had only "jeered" them.

The crowd was dispersed, but Henry Struessie, 21 years old, of 2356 Arlington avenue, a striker, failed to move on when ordered. He preferred taking a ride in the patrol wagon and a peace disturbance charge was placed against him.

St. Louis Needs More Schools, Sags Dr. Judd

St. Louis averages larger classes in its schools than any other city of its class, and it is probable that nowhere in the country is there a more crowded condition than here. The reduction of expense by crowding children in the schoolroom is large.

The heavy burden being borne by teachers in the elementary schools, due to the overcrowding, could not be sustained if the housing conditions were not of the best type and if the central office did not supply assistance in the instruction of special courses, such as music, drawing and physical training.

Comparison of Schools.

In a comparison of the organization of the high schools and the elementary schools the survey finds that, while the classes in the latter are over large, in the high schools they are small. On this situation Dr. Judd says:

"The question seems to be one of adjustment between a situation in the elementary schools which is highly unsatisfactory and a situation in the high schools which is much more nearly what is called for in an adequately equipped school system. If St. Louis decides that it cannot furnish additional funds to the Board of Education, the high schools will undoubtedly be one of the first points of retrenchment. There is no possibility of larger economies in the elementary schools.

"If, on the other hand, the city gives funds for the further extension of educational opportunities, it will be very difficult to present arguments for the curtailment of the present high school equipment and courses.

"In short, the attitude of the survey staff is very clear. The elementary schools in St. Louis should be given increased facilities for work. The high schools should not be curtailed. They should be extended in a number of directions and their work ought to be encouraged rather than limited."

Special Departments.

Commenting on the criticism of special departments of the school system, such as the school for defective children and outdoor schools for children in need of special care, Dr. Judd says the survey staff finds that all of the special departments of the St. Louis schools are essential to a progressive educational system. The readjustments of these departments suggested by the survey staff entail additional expenditures instead of economies in the work.

The solution of the school problem confronting St. Louis depends on the will and power to meet the situation, Dr. Judd declares. St. Louis, he says, has great resources which are not now drawn upon to support education.

Suggested Solutions.

Unless funds are provided, Dr. Judd says, economies will have to be worked out on the following lines:

St. Louis can cut down on the support of high schools. This would mean that St. Louis would recede from a policy which in recent years has made the city one of the conspicuous examples of cosmopolitan high school education.

Again, St. Louis can build cheaper school buildings. If this program is adopted there is no escape from the possibility of building some kind of buildings. Already 6000 pupils are housed in portables, and there is danger that half-day sessions will have to be adopted.

Again, St. Louis can abandon special classes for defectives and those who are below physical normality. This would mean a regression in public hygiene that an enlightened citizenship would regard as a misfortune.

High Grade Instruction.

Instruction in the elementary and high schools is of a high grade, the investigators found. The teachers who come into the schools from the Harris Teachers' College are successful. The organization of the schools is far above the average. The courses of study in the elementary schools are conservative.

The instruction in reading was found very efficient and the power of the pupils to understand and interpret what they read was especially conspicuous. More attention should be paid to silent reading.

Pupils are receiving superior training in arithmetic, it was found, and the teachers understand and bridge the difficulties confronted by small children in number work better than in the schools of most large cities.

St. Louis pupils, the report states, are superior throughout to those of any other city in the point of speed in writing. The quality of the handwriting is not high, however, and suggestions to remedy this are made.

Administrative Work.

The administrative officers and their work are praised by the staff, while the organization of the accounting and bookkeeping departments is criticised for duplication of work in several instances.

The survey of the schools occupied about two months and was made at an expense to the Board of Education of $10,000. Dr. Judd was employed to supervise the work of the survey and he engaged all of the members of the staff which assisted him.

ST. LOUIS TO GET LOWER RATE ON FREIGHT TO THE SOUTH

Reductions to Points in Southern Arkansas and Louisana Ordered Effective Before Feb. 1.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Reduction before Feb. 1 of the freight rates from St. Louis, Kansas City and Memphis to Shreveport and Alexandria, La., and points in Southern Arkansas and Louisiana, were ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission today. Rates considered reasonable were prescribed. They will remain in force two years.

The orders resulted from complaints made by the Memphis Freight Bureau and the Shreveport Chamber of Commerce and the Chamber of Commerce of Alexandria against virtually all the big trunk lines. In a report on May 9 the commission found the rates complained of were unjust, unreasonable and discriminatory. The orders in the proceeding were held in abeyance to give opportunity for further hearing, it being considered that the issues between these and other cases pending before the commission are to a large extent inter-related. No application having been made for a further hearing, the orders were issued.

WANTS CONFERENCE OVER THE CHARTER'S EFFICIENCY CLAUSE

Chairman Hertenstein Believes It Is Best Way to Interpet Exact Meaning.

To determine what the Board of Freeholders regarded as the powers and duties of the Efficiency Board when the present charter was drafted, Charles Hertenstein, new chairman of the Efficiency Board, will call a conference of the charter makers and his associates. Heads of city departments also will be invited to attend the conference and explain their attitude toward the efficiency provisions of the charter and offer suggestions as to the methods of enforcing them.

Hertenstein was a freeholder and helped draft the charter. He says that there has been so much misunderstanding on the subject of efficiency requirements that it will be useful to have the views of others who shared in drafting the document.

At its meeting yesterday the Efficiency Board decided that another examination will be conducted for the place of superintendent of excavations now held by Henry L. (Hank) Weeke. At the request of Street Commissioner Slater the board extended Weeke's temporary appointment 60 days.

C. A. STIX IN WILL LEAVES HIS ENTIRE ESTATE TO WIDOW

Document Says She Will Make Proper Provision for Their Daughter, Winifred.

The will of Charles A. Stix of 26 Portland place, president of the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co. (the Grand-Leader), who died Monday, was filed for probate today. The document was very brief, containing little more than barely enough words to say that the testator left his entire property to his widow in the confidence that she would make proper provision for their daughter, Winifred.

The widow, Mrs. Sadie Fraley Stix, and Aaron Fuller, second vice president of the dry goods concern, were named executors to serve without bond. Fuller said he could not estimate the value of the estate, but he believed it would be found to be great.

Fuller and Mrs. Stix appeared at the courthouse together. They remained there only long enough to comply with the legal formalities and talked together in a low tone when reporters asked if they could give an approximation of the value of the estate.

The will was made Feb. 8 last, about the time Mr. Stix was starting on a trip to hospitals in Chicago and New York in search of treatment for the malady which finally proved fatal. It was witnessed by George Laski and L. S. Spiro. It filled only one typewritten page.

When asked if the widow had decided upon any plans for the daughter's future, Fuller said that Miss Stix is to be married within a few weeks to Henry Rice Jr., credit manager for the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. Their engagement was announced some time before the death of Mr. Stix.

Widow Native St. Louisan.

Mrs. Stix, who, under the will, becomes owner of all her husband's property of every description, is a native St. Louisan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Fraley of 26 Portland place. She was married to Mr. Stix in May, 1890. Their daughter is 20 years old and made her debut into society two seasons ago, when she was a student at Washington University.

PERMITS FOR TERMINAL TRACKS ON "PAPER STREETS" WITHHELD

Public Service Board Wants to Give Property Owners a Chance to Be Heard.

Until property owners in North St. Louis have had a chance to be heard, the Board of Public Service will withhold permits requested by the Terminal Railroad Association for tracks on five "paper" streets between Broadway, Bulwer avenue, Luther avenue and Taylor avenue. The granting of the permits has been recommended by C. E. Smith, consulting engineer of the Department of Public Utilities.

The Terminal Association says the additional trackage is necessary for the handling of business on the west belt line, which has become congested for want of storage room. The new tracks will increase the capacity of the Terminal's North Side yard from 300 to 1100 cars.

All the property abutting the several streets on which rights are requested is owned by the Terminal Association. The tract was recently purchased by the Terminal Association and has an area of 20 acres.

HOSPITAL INTERNES CHANGE MINDS ABOUT GOING ON STRIKE

Forty-Five in City Institution Held Meeting After One of Their Number Is Discharged.

An attempt by 45 junior internes at the City Hospital to force the reinstatement of one of their number, Dr. A. L. Scheff, by threatening to strike, failed last night at a meeting held at the hospital.

Hospital Commissioner Schutt attended the meeting and told the internes that Dr. Scheff had been discharged because he had been guilty of a violation of etiquette toward Miss Amelia Hagemann, superintendent of nurses, while treating one of the patients at the hospital.

Dr. Scheff entered the room where the meeting was held while Commissioner Schutt was speaking. He was ordered to depart, and when he did not obey, Commissioner Schutt advanced toward him with his hand raised. The young doctor finally went out, after which the internes voted not to strike.

OLD STAMP LAW IS DEAD

Beginning today, nobody needs to place revenue stamps on documents, cosmetics and chewing gum. The emergency revenue law requiring such stamps, which had been in effect since Dec. 1, 1914, was repealed at midnight by the new revenue law.

Liquor dealers are required to stamp all wines still on hand, but thereafter wines and cordials will be stamped by the manufacturer and producer. The bill provides for the redemption of revenue stamps any time within two years through the local Internal Revenue Collector's office.

The stamp taxes, exclusive of the tax on wines and cordials, yielded $761,806.50 revenue in this district for the year ending July 1.

BRITAIN IS USING CENSORSHIP TO GET COMMERCIAL DATA

Admission by Loyd George in Speech in House Was Censored Out of Dispatches to U. S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Extension of the British mail censorship from its original purpose of dstroying all trade to or from Germany to the field of providing data for Great Britain's fight for commercial supremacy is seen here in admissions made by David Lloyd-George, the War Secretary, before Parliament, just received in full in this country. Lloyd-George said:

"It is the practice to communicate to other departments concerned any information on matters of public interest which may be obtained through the censorship, for such use to be made of it as the particular department may consider advisable. * * * The Government is perfectly within its rights in using any information which comes to it in these conditions for any public and national purpose."

This statement, made recently in response to questions by members of the House of Commons, created a stir there. It apparently had been censored out of cable dispatches to the United States. When asked about the matter tonight, Secretary Lansing said it had been called to the attention of the State Department officially, but he declined to make any comment at this time.

It is understood, however, that the department will take a most serious view of Lloyd-George's interpretation of the British War Office's power and will protest more vigorously than ever against interference with neutral mails on the high seas. Although the American Government has contended strongly against the wholesale detentions and seizures of mail between neutral countries, as in violation of international law, so far there has been no formal charge that improper use was being made of information gleaned from open neutral correspondence.

Officials here already were vexed at England's long delay in answering the American censorship note of May 26, and it is probable that any inquiry into the new development will express that feeling. A brief preliminary note was received July 20, but it was inconclusive.

It is pointed out that the War Minister's attitude appears to be in flat contradiction to that expressed by Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Trade, and reiterated emphatically in his statement Aug. 25, saying:

"It cannot be emphasized too strongly that the general and statistical information extracted from trade letters, which has proved so invaluable to his majesty's Government in checking the supply of material sent through neutral to enemy countries and suppressing the export of enemy goods, is used for these purposes solely, and never for the purpose of substituting allied trade for neutral."

Lloyd George's statement arose, not in connection with enemy trade or imports to neutral countries, but entirely in regard to an attempt to build up a protective tariff wall for a new British industry against competition by importations from a neutral country. Some days before Andrew Bonar Law had requested a 2£ export tax on palm nut kernels from British West Africa to all places but England, where a new industry had been built up to replace the lost German markets. During his argument he said that information contained in the censored letter of a neutral oleomargarin manufacturer indicated that competition would come from that source and that the export tax would be necessary to preserve the industry to the country.

Later a member of Parliament asked Lloyd George whether he was aware that "when the censorship was instituted we were told it was definitely and solely for the object of preventing information getting to the enemy which would be of advantage to them and that otherwise the freedom of discussion and the secrecy of correspondence would not be infringed."

The War Minister replied that he did not know what principle was laid down, but that the Government could use any information thus secured for any public national purpose.

Questions at once flashed from several parts of the chamber. One member asked him if it was necessary "to divulge private letters which the censor has thought it necessary to stop." Another wanted to know whether "it is the intention of the department to use letters which have been disclosed in the censor's office for purpose altogether distinct from the purpose of the war, Mr. George replied:

"The function of the war office, or at least of the officials for whom I am answering, is to send along to the departments any information which comes into their possession by means of letters opened in this way. There the responsibility of the War Office ends."

HUGHES ATTACKS ADAMSON LAW IN FOUR SPEECHES

Declares at Bangor, Me., Americans Never Will Give Up "Government by Reason."

BANGOR, Me., Sept. 9.—Maine audiences from Lewiston to Bangor yesterday heard Charles E. Hughes assail the administration for "surrender to force" in the enactment of the Adamson law.

The nominee ended the second day of his Maine campaign with an address in the Auditorium here last night, in which he brought his audience to its feet with prolonged applause and cheers by a declaration that the American people would never give up government by law and reason, won at the cost of continuous fighting.

"Look at the history of the past," he said, "and its majestic spectacle of the people coming down that long path. Now they are defeated; now they are victorious, but still they come on, the plain people. They come slowly on, winning their way, crushing out every form of tyranny, destroying autocracy, securing the right to choose their own representatives, winning representative government till here in America we have the finest demonstration the world has ever known of Government by law and reason. Shall we give it up? Never! Never!"

The audience rose, waved hundreds of small American flags, cheered and applauded.

In all his four addresses yesterday—at Lewiston, Waterville, Pittsfield and here—the nominee made his attack on the administration in connection with the Adamson law, one of his chief themes. Crowds turned out at each place to hear him and cheered and applauded. In his last speech here last night, the nominee told his audience that he felt sure of a Republican victory in both the State and the nation.

In his speeches Hughes, in addition to discussing the Adamson law, outlined his views on the tariff, preparedness, Americanism, efficiency of government, a world court and other Republican policies. He also reviewed his record as Governor of New York in connection with labor legislation, declared that he was the friend of labor and would be the first to give higher wages were the demand for higher wages found to be just after an examination of the facts, but added that he would first investigate the facts.

Hughes left Bangor early today for his last day of campaigning in Maine. Monday is election day in the State.

The scheduled stops on the itinerary today were Augusta, Brunswick, Bath and Damariscotta. The Rockland speech tonight will be the last Mr. Hughes will deliver in Maine. He will spend Sunday in Boston and then go to Syracuse, N. Y.

Gompers Cites Republican Votes for Adamson Bill.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 9.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address here last night, took issue with Charles E. Hughes' criticisms of the Adamson eight-hour law. To Hughes' statement that it was enacted through coercion and force, the labor leader said he knew of no threats having been made and that no force was used. He said he did not have much faith in what can be accomplished by law, but in this instance, he felt Congress had shown itself to be in favor of the principle of the eight-hour day as one that appealed to the sense of justice.

"Mr. Hughes scores Congress for passing the Adamson act, but he seems to forget that more than half the Republican members in both houses voted for the bill," he asserted.

Hughes Speaks to Large Crowd at Augusta.

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 9.—A large crowd greeted the Hughes special here today. Mr. Hughes spoke in the station square, urging the need of a protective tariff to meet the competition which he insisted the United States would face after the European war. He also outlined his views on preparedness and efficiency of government and condemned the hasty enactment of the Adamson bill.

"I am opposed in the name of labor and fair dealing to any submission to force," he said. "We cannot afford to surrender the principle of government by law and reason which we have won at heavy cost."

The home of Mrs. Zeta Tracy, 5736 McPherson avenue, whose address was one of a number found on a slip of paper dropped by a burglar who was fleeing from a nearby apartment in Westminster place Thursday night, was robbed last night in the absence of the family. A purse and $4 were stolen.

S. H. Milligan, 5818 Page boulevard, reported that for the second time within a week his home was ransacked. He lost $6. Other burglaries were reported by Ernest McGuigan, 5878 North Market street; Mrs. Harry C. Harrison, 1281 Oak Court, and James Wollis, 1002 North Thirteenth street.

GIRL MISSING FIVE DAYS FOUND AT HOUSE OCCUPIED BY MAN

Two Men Arrested and Released—One Has Wedding Ring—Wedding Was Planned.

Miss Martha McCormick, 22 years old, of Farmington, Mo., who had been sought by relatives since Sunday, was found last night at 4500 Duncan avenue, a few doors from the boarding house where she had been staying. Junius I. Mulholland, 21 years old, was arrested when he returne dto the house with a wedding ring for Miss McCormick.

The girl's hiding place was discovered when one of her relatives, searching in the neighborhood, saw her skirt hanging on a line in the back yard. She told the police that she went to the house of her own accord. Mulholland has been staying there during the absence of his guardian, who owns the house. He struck up an acquaintance with Miss McCormick as she passed the house. They went to the house Sunday. There were other guests. She stayed later than she intended to and was afraid to return to her boarding place. She and Mulholland were planning to be married when she was found.

Miss McCormick was turned over to her relatives and Mulholland was locked up. William McGrath, 19 years old, of 4367 Cook avenue, who was with Mulholland when he was arrested, was also held. Mulholland and McGrath were released when a warrant was refused.

HUMPBACKED DEATH GOD UNEARTHED IN WEST INDIES

Archaeologist Says Indians Let Fish Clean Bones of Dead and Then Buried Them in Fireplaces.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Capt. Theodore de Booy, in charge of an archaeological expedition that made excavations in the West Indies for the Museum of the American Indian, Heye foundation, has arrived from Santo Domingo. He dug up, among other things, the objects used in 28 Indian burials.

The Indians, he said, took their dead to the Macoris River and tied them to the bank, letting the fish clean the bones. Then they dug a hole in the fireplace of the dead person's recent abode and in it buried the bones, always placing the skull on top, facing the rising sun. They placed a bowl about 18 inches in diameter above the bones and a small bowl beside them. It is supposed the bowls contained food for the dead person on the trip to the happy hunting grounds.

The most interesting relic Capt. de Booy brought back was a humpbacked death god, 16 inches high. All that is known of its age is that it is Columbian or more than 400 years old. It is supposed that the Indians of that time and place worshiped a god who was humpbacked.

NEW POLICE BOARD NULLIFIES COMPULSORY GYMNASIUM ORDER

Shower Baths and Handball Courts May Be Installed in District Stations Instead.

The new Police Board last evening nullified the compulsory gymnasium order, which required patrolmen to report for indoor athletic exercises on their own time three days a week.

Ever since the physical culture branch of the service was established, in 1910, by the Woerheide board, the rank and file of the department, particularly the older members, had complained of what they termed a hardship. The present board is considering the installation of shower baths and handball courts at the district stations, depending on the availability of funds.

Henry Ostertag, the newest member, who took his seat, was elected treasurer of the board.

The resignation of J. Frank Tevis, chief of the clerical staff of the Police Board's purchasing member, was accepted. John Sheahan, the purchasing member of the board, will name Tevis' successor. The position pays $1650.

Four Men Charged With Burglary.

Warrants charging burglary and larceny were issued last evening against four men in connection with the theft of wearing apparel valued at $950 from the furnishing goods store of Harry Brown, 1534 Franklin avenue. The police say that they obtained an admission from Henry Spector, 915 North Sixth street, and Jacob Blickman, no home, in which Sam Finkelstein, 1414 Franklin avenue, and Sam Levitt, stopping at the Metropole Hotel, were implicated.

MISSING EMPEROR OF THE SAHARA HAS $135,189 COMING

"Monarch" Who Deserted His Kingdom Has Money Due From Trust Company.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—If anyone knows where His Majesty Jacques Lebaudy, erstwhile "Emperor of the Sahara" and still more recently a potentate in the King Park Asylum, is holding court, he should inform Eugene Lamb Richards, New York Superintendent of Banks. It has become the Superintendent's duty to deliver to the former monarch of the desert $135,189.

But a complication has arisen. His majesty has declined to accept the money under any circumstances. Wilbert Ward, attorney for Richards, has been compelled to appeal for "relief."

His majesty won't have the money, in spite of the fact that Justice Shearn has decreed that it shall be paid to him from the funds of the defunct Carnegie Trust Co.

Heir of Several Millions.

Fifteen years ago Jacques Lebaudy inherited several million dollars from his father, Max Lebaudy, who was known as the "Sugar King of France." Having lots of money but no title, Jacques set out with 500 followers to found an empire in the heart of the Sahara.

He and his colonials reached their destination in 1903, and Lebaudy immediately crowned himself Emperor. He made his valet a Count, his gardener a baron, and his stable boy a knight. At the end of seven months he left his kingdom to shift for himself and returned to Paris.

France sent an expedition into the desert to rescue the Emperor's stranded subjects—counts, barons, knights, et al—and the action of the Republic in breaking up his kingdom so angered his majesty that he decided to leave France forever.

Accordingly he came to America, and placed in the hands of the Carnegie Trust Co. the power to dispose of his vast properties in Europe.

The property to be disposed of, Lebaudy calculated, is worth at least $2,000,000, but the trust company, in selling it, was able to realize only slightly above $400,000. His majesty brought suit for $1,600,000 and after the Carnegie company had become insolvent his attorneys pressed their claims against the superintendent of banks. The legal battle lasted five years, Lebaudy's lawyers holding up money that could have been paid to the other depositors of the trust company while they contended in court that their client was a preferred creditor.

Gets 40 Cents on a Dollar.

Justice Shearn decided Lebaudy had a claim of $337,974 against the Carnegie Trust Co. Since the company has been paying its creditors 40 cents on the dollar, Supt. Richards was ordered to deliver $135,189 to the Emperor.

Lebaudy, on complaint of his wife, recently was lodged in the King's Park Asylum, on Long Island. He was released Oct. 5 of last year, and dropped out of sight before Supt. Richards could deliver the money awarded to him.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Public's Business.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Whenever a railroad strike threatens to inconvenience the middle class, the latter promptly constitutes itself the "public" and calls heaven and earth to witness the anticipated injury to itself through the "arrogant demands of labor." Now, as a matter of fact, 90 per cent of the public is composed of the working class and any suffering caused by a strike will be borne at that ratio or worse by the latter class. But labor is beginning to realize that were it not for its incessant struggles for betterment, it would still be in its rugged condition of the early days of machine production; barefoot, songless, rickety from semi-starvation, with disease and abject squalor as their portion and reward for a 14-hour work day for young and old. A strengthening of any part of the working class helps to stiffen the entire body. This is just as true as that an improved condition of the working class means in the long run more prosperity for the middle class.

Although I myself am engaged in an unorganized calling, it does my heart good to see that at least part of the workers have sense enough to organize and are men enough to fight for their dues as useful human beings, and their rightful places in the sun.

Of course, it is ridiculous and humiliating that a great nation should be at the mercy of private interests in the matter of transportation, just as ridiculous as a farmer would be who allowed his hired man to own and control the roads on his own farm. Railroads are but improved roads, and, together with waterways, constitute the arteries of a nation. Some day the people will even consider it as important a part of its own business to feed, clothe and house itself, i. e., to take over and operate trusts, as today it considers the mailing of letters as their business.

P. W. EBERSOLL,
6036 Washington av., St. Louis, Sept. 6, 1916.

Should Ministers Smoke?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I think that our ministers and priests should be models and examples of the proper way to live. Instead, there are some who go along the streets smoking. Do you honestly think this is right? What effect does this have on the minds of children? The habit is not natural; we learned it from the Indians. What, shall we pattern after savages? It ruins the health, as you may see at the hospitals and insane asylums.

I think we should try to save the next generations from the evil effects of this habit, even though you have it yourselves; and then the white plague would disappear.

Men smoke and drink until they become wrecks and then blame the children's weakness on air or some other thing. There should be laws passed to blot these curses from the face of the earth.

What you sow you reap, if not in this world, the next. READER.

Passage of the Adamson Law.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The Globe-Democrat editorially deplores the passing of the Adamson bill, calls Congress' action cowardice and raises a false alarm that the honor and dignity of the nation was sacrificed. To whom were they sacrificed? The honor and dignity of the nation can only be sacrificed where fundamental principles are surrendered to a foreign nation, and not where domestic legislation is enacted to meet an extraordinary situation and save the country from an unparalleled disaster. The President and Congress not only were not cowards but bravely performed the duty with which they were charged without fear and without regard to any political effect the performance of their duty may have. If such actions are to be called "cowardice," then the country is in sore need of such coward actors as the President and Congress proved to be.

The comparison the Globe-Democrat makes as to what we would do if the butchers or the farmers were to go on a strike unless certain demands are granted, is pure nonsense and utterly inapplicable in the railroad strike. Suppose the women would refuse to get married, the cooks to cook meals, the stores to open, the tailors to make clothes, the Judges to try cases, the doctors to treat the sick, the sun to shine, the waters to flow, etc., unless certain demands are granted. Then what would YOU do, Mr. Editor of the Globe-Democrat?

Can the Globe-Democrat in sincerity say that the Adamson bill, as a law, regardless of the circumstances under which it was passed, is wrong, and if so, why? Does it dare say to its readers in plain language that the President and Congress should stand idle and let a national calamity, unsurpassed in the history of the nation, befall the country, and if they had done so, would the Globe-Democrat have the courage to say that the President and Congress would have had performed their duty? JOHN P. THEODOROPOULOS.

THE WEEKES IN THE SADDLE.

Under the ruling of Mr. Daues, which the Efficiency Board accepts, Hanke Weeke gets an indefinite lease of official life. Mr. Daues rules that the Efficiency Board must admit three names, since only one, and that one not Weeke, passed the examination. The board has called another examination at some future date yet to be decided.

The Weekes are in the saddle. The reorganized board is going to find out what its duties are by conferences with the members of the Board of Freeholders, who have already done their work. They are going to devise some form of practical tests differing from the tests which Mr. Rogers applied efficiently to keep out of office misfits and unfits.

Chairman Hertenstein suggests a new standardization and classification of appointive offices. It is estimated that the work of standardizing and classifying the offices and devising practical tests will take about a year. It will require only the postponement of tests until next April to satisfy the Mayor, the heads of departments and the machine spoilsmen. The delay of the board in applying tests will clear the way for the "temporary" appointment of useful henchmen whose influence will be worth something in the April election.

Delay in the application of genuine efficiency tests will undoubtedly result in the packing of the city hall with men whose political efficiency will be far more in evidence than their official efficiency.

RESULTS.

While Mr. Hughes is criticising the manner in which President Wilson settled the railroad strike, the trains are running and the exceptional business activity and prosperity of the country continues unbroken.

While Mr. Hughes is denouncing President Wilson's manner of settling the submarine controversy, American lives are protected, American rights are respected, the freedom and safety of the seas for Americans and all neutrals are established and there is amity between Germany and America.

While Mr. Hughes is attacking President Wilson's Mexican policy there is peace between the United States and Mexico, our border is protected and an American-Mexican commission is settling all differences between the two countries.

President Wilson got the results the American people want. What Mr. Hughes would have gotten is a speculative question.

SKINKER ROAD DELAY.

As an example of civic inefficiency, the action of the Board of Public Service in permitting the inexcusable delay in completing the Skinker road improvement, as described in Friday's Post-Dispatch, is unfortunately typical. The contract, involving a simple amount of grading and paving, was let a year ago. The job was to be completed May 24, but it will be several weeks before one side of the road will be open to traffic. For more than a year the public has been forced to make detours, deprived of the use of this one direct road between the north and south boundaries of Forest Park.

The excuses given, rains, lack of labor, and work by the contractor in other parts of the city, are wholly inadequate. This has not been an unusually wet year. The United Railways and other concerns employing labor have found enough men. And no public contract should be held up because the contractor has other things to attend to. The penalties should have been collected, after a reasonable extra time had been allowed for uncontrollable conditions.

The Board of Public Service is setting a bad example in permitting contractors to avoid penalties after delaying work for many months, thus disregarding the essence of contracts. Individual efficiency on the part of public servants cannot be expected if city departments allow contractors to do as they please.

The general public already has a union, of the strongest kind. It's older than all the other unions and immeasurably greater. Its headquarters is at Washington, D. C., and its present chief executive officer is Woodrow Wilson.

LABOR TROUBLES EVERYWHERE.

One can hardly take up a European newspaper without reading reports of labor activities. Thus in France the railroad employes have gone out for recognition of the "unions;" the silk spinners for a grievance of one of their number, the glassblowers for advanced wages, the patissiers (bakers) for shorter hours and an increase of 1 franc daily in their wage; in England they have just settled the coal miners' strike, and the walkout of the railroad service men; in Germany the street car men have struck for shorter hours with the former pay; in Italy the ammunition workers have "struck" for shorter hours, and Spain has a carters' strike.

It is interesting to note how the various Governments handle these strikes. In France, M. Laurent, the Chief of Police, "broke the railway strike by ordering the employes back to work, and invoked the military to enforce his orders." In England the Government appointed a permanent commission to regulate hours and wages. In Italy the munition factories were surrounded by soldiers and the employes forced to work. In Germany the strike was ended by the police, under orders from military headquarters, and in Spain rurales (policemen) were put in place of the strikers.

The glassblowers, however, scored a decided success, as they were granted a work day of five hours to the shift (two shifts per day) instead of the indefinite duration of the shift often extending over ten hours, which meant that some of the men had to work 20 hours daily, according to the former schedule.

In France the condition has developed that the officials and the courts there insist on labor unions becoming incorporated, so "that they can sue and be sued."

In this connection it may be interesting to note that the prices of foodstuffs have been fixed in Germany by the Government, and that the price of butter has also been fixed by the Government in France, which placed it at 41 cents per pound.

A great strike might have made a Food Dictator necessary in America. An all-at-once $2.25 potato charge is suggestive of the forces that would have been put on had there been no emergency legislation.

REGISTER AND VOTE!

St. Louis voters, everyone of whom must register, whether on the old books or not, to be able to vote in the November election, should keep in mind the dates, Sept. 18, 19, 20 and 21, during which they may get their names on the registration books. All should register and go to the polls Nov. 7, prepared to make themselves factors in the selection of a chief executive for the country during the coming presidential term.

The present presidential campaign is not an exciting one. On the one side, the present incumbent of the office has no need to make a pyrotechnic stumping tour with bombs, red fire and promises. His record is his most eloquent and convincing appeal to the voters. The people know him well, and as he finds opportunity to make himself heard, in speech and by letter, from time to time, they see where he stands on all important questions. His administration has to its credit achievements for the public good that have not been equaled by the achievements of Federal administrations during the past 30 years.

On the other hand, the candidate seeking the office offers the voters little else but fault-finding criticism of that record and those achievements. Up to a few days ago, his campaign was without any issue. The settlement of the railroad strike has supplied it with an issue. But no one doubts that a majority of the voters will uphold the Democratic solution of the railroad strike problem. The country had the choice between that solution, by constructive legislation, and nation-wide disaster.

Register, and vote! Former registration will not do. Vote for a continuance of sane, safe and humane administration of the Government.

ROOSEVELT A "GERMAN-EATER."

A Granite City German-American who has been a zealous and persistent letter writer in behalf of all those views and acts for which "The Fatherland" is chief advocate, writes the Post-Dispatch that "as long as Mr. Hughes tacitly accepts the brand of support which the German-eaters, Roosevelt, Root and Lodge, are offering, the very respectable number of German Republicans must draw the conclusion that Hughes is still more radically anti-German than Wilson, and thus resolve to refrain from voting in November."

This is a pointer for the Hughes campaign managers worth noting. If they wish to retain any appreciable part of the German-American vote for their candidate, they should muzzle "German-eater" Roosevelt.

FOOD AND TRAFFIC.

Traffic, a principal meaning of which is "the business done upon a railway," is regulated by government. With the exception of a law prohibiting adulteration, food is practically unregulated by law. It is in the control of corporations and individuals who, as in the present milk strike, can deprive the consumers of it, as a result of quarrels between employers and workers.

Yet is not the supply of food as important as the traffic industry? Is it not just as necessary to the public welfare that quarrels between the men who control our food and their employes be arbitrated, as it is that arbitration be the method of settling similar quarrels between traffic managers and their employes?

It was in the public interest that Judge Anderson offered his services to arbitrate the milk strike. It should be arbitrated. Women and little babies are the chief sufferers because of the refusal of the dairymen to arbitrate.

A COCKSURE CANDIDATE.

The Prohibition candidate for President proclaims that he is sure to lose the race, but equally sure of the soundness of the principle on which he is running, and would rather be right than President.

If the principle of the denial of personal liberty to the individual were sound, there would be no presidency to run for, no free United States to preside over, but despotism would still enthrall mankind as in the Dark Ages. Prohibition was essentially the thing which our forbears and founders of republican institutions fought to get away from.

That there are bigger questions in this world in this Twentieth Century than a man's right to take a drink if he wants it is inconceivable to the petty exponents of tyranny and medievalism. Foes of small vice, friends of great vices, their assurance of certain failure to upset progress and deprive us of freedom is comforting. A United States of America ruled by a Prohibitionist offers a picture of nightmare, chaos and political delirium tremens that would scare sober civilization out of its senses if it were not accompanied by the assurance that it never could happen.

ENTER THE BEERHOUND.

ALL of us wonder now and then how some of the more popular breeds of dogs have been invented and by what course of evolution they have probably come. An expert on Airedales can deliver an excellent porch lecture on the origin and development of that useful and hard-fighting animal, and the story of some of the more complex cockers is something for which few of us care to sit up. Let us, then, spare ourselves having to hear all this in the case of the beerhound, whose origin is here and now and is made plain in the following dispatch:

> DES MOINES, Io., Aug. 26.—Two "beer" hounds today trailed their first bootlegger to his lair in this city. From "deer" hounds to "beer" hounds has been the experience of the dogs—the terror of blind-piggers and moonshiners. Crossed between deerhounds and bloodhounds, the animals were easily taught to follow beer and whisky scents. The hounds, given a whiff of beer, led the way to a house suspected for some time. The police found 20 gallons of beer and six gallons of whisky, and arrested the proprietor.

Thus does necessity once more claim invention as her child.

The Boston Globe is our notion of a mean newspaper. It wants to know when Col. John M. Parker is to be notified that the Progressives nominated him for Vice President.

PRISON DOORS AJAR.

(An Eight-Hour Song.)

THE Eight Hour law has come to stay!
We've waited weary years;
We've fought for it, by night and day,
And prayed for it with tears.
We workingmen need time to play,
As well as food and sleep,
And we should have sufficient pay
Our families to keep.

Refrain:
The Eight Hour Law—Hurrah! Hurray!
The Eight Hour Law is ours—
The law that gives us time to play
In pleasant, daylight hours.
The Eight Hour Law—Hurrah! Hurray!
The Eight Hour Law is ours;
And in the woods each summer day
We'll gather fruits and flowers.

A date with Nature we will keep,
We'll fill our lungs with air;
We'll still have time enough for sleep—
To waste an hour we'll dare.
We'll see the museums of art,
Old pictures, rich and rare—
Make music of our lives a part,
And banish Carking Care.

Let beatless carpets make life sweeter;
Yet all such bliss is not to match

These things are fine, but listen, boys,
I'll make your hearts with envy burst,
My wish exceeds your greatest joys—
I choose for mine a bill-less first.
—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

The wonder that we long for most
Would all our summer joys enhance,
And would spread joy from coast to coast;
We long for opaque Palm Beach pants.

These trifles may do very well,
The favor asked seems very small;
But what we always want like hell
Is a nice depoliticianed Fall.

M. G. S.—As to rheumatism, one writer says: Avoid fatigue, cold and dampness; wear warm flannel. Linseed poultices give temporary relief. Permanent relief can only be afforded by attention to the whole system. Avoid meats and other nitrogenous foods; take vegetable acids in fruits and fresh vegetables. Lemonade without sugar is excellent for many kinds, taken as a prophylactic. A victim of a long siege of rheumatism says he was finally cured by simply rubbing with turpentine. Another declares that hot baths are the sovereign cure. Another finds relief by avoiding sugar and milk, or cream, together in any form, especially in tea or coffee. Either may be taken alone, but not at the same meal. A glass of pure water about an hour before meal time; two meals a day of good cereal and hot milk; fruit, if wanted; a generous dinner of meat, vegetables, etc., will cure an aggravated and painful case of rheumatic trouble. Another says: "Leave red meats, such as beef and also dark meat of poultry, out of your dietary." Another prescribes: One ounce of Virginia snakeroot cut up with scissors and put into a quart bottle. Upon this pour one pint of good rye whisky. After 24 hours it is ready for use. Dose: Two tablespoons of the decoction in a goblet and fill up to brim with hot water. Drink slowly. Repeat half an hour before each meal and upon going to bed. Another: Lemon juice added to milk until it curds and these curds then bound upon parts swollen from rheumatism will bring relief. And yet another: One hundred bee stings in two ounces alcohol. Let stands three or four days, occasionally shaking. Then pour off clear part. Dose, adult, three times a day. Avoid tea, coffee and meat. Many forbid all sweets. (Talk with a doctor about your chronic stomach troubles.)

AGNES.—The Methodist Episcopal Church is an outgrowth of the Protestant Episcopal and there is little or no difference in the essential doctrines or faith of the two. John Wesley, founder of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was ordained deacon of the Church of England and preached in that church several years. The term Methodist relates to matters of form and church government rather than to faith. The term Methodist Episcopal is not used in England, the parent church there being called Wesleyan Methodist. The latter term also prevails to some extent in this country where there are more than a dozen different branches of Methodism, all agreeing in essential doctrine, but differing in some minor details. The Free Methodist Church has no Bishops, but general superintendents and is opposed to secret societies, church choirs, etc.

SOLDIER.—Young and Chaffee both became Lieutenant-Generals, one having begun service in a volunteer regiment and the other in the regulars. If the ranks of Major-General and Brigadier-General are considered, the list of enlisted men who won stars becomes imposing. There are now living seven retired Major-Generals who began as enlisted men, and about forty Brigadier-Generals, to say nothing of those Colonels who on retiring received General's rank because of service in the Civil War. Many others have died. Half a dozen of these men received West Point appointments after serving in the ranks. There are now on the active list four Captains and 19 First Lieutenants who won appointments to the Military Academy after service in the ranks, four of these having been in regular army regiments.

The Glass Dealer of Bagdad

A Story of Wisdom From the Thousand and One Tales.

IN the reign of El Muntasir, the great-grandson of Haroun al Raschid, there dwelled in Bagdad a man of such foresight that it may well be said he looked ahead too far for his own eyesight. His name was El Feshshar, which means the Vain Boaster.

Having inherited a hundred pieces of silver, El Feshshar determined that he would invest it so wisely that it should make him enduringly rich. Accordingly, he bought glassware with it. Having put his entire stock into an enormous basket, he exposed it for sale in a public place and leaned against a wall to meditate over the profits.

"I will sell it," he reflected, "for 200 pieces of silver. With the 200 I will buy other glass which I will sell for 400. Thus will I continue selling and buying until I have attained enormous wealth.

"Now what shall I do with this enormous wealth?" he thought. "Behold!" he said to himself. "I will buy rare essences and gems and sell these for vast gain. Then I shall have enough, and must cease traffic, lest it be evilly said of me that I am avaricious, which I am not. Nay! I will retire and buy me a wonderfully handsome house, and slaves of quality and horses with gilded saddles."

He pondered over his glassware and it glittered in his eyes. "I will send all the female betrothers," he continued, "to seek in marriage for me the daughter of the Chief Vizier of the Sultan of Bagdad, for she alone is endowed with that perfect loveliness that is worthy of so rich a man as I am. I will give as her dowry—"he stopped and calculated—"yes! I will give as her dowry a thousand pieces of gold. That will, indeed, be a trifle. If her father should not consent, I will take her by force."

He Muses on How Mean He Expects to Be to His Wife.

AGAIN he admired his glassware which held in it such a fortune. "Ah, yes," he said, nodding his head. "On my saddle of gold set with jewels I will ride to the Vizier's house through the town, with slaves behind me and before me, that all my old friends shall behold my magnificence and envy my state. It will amuse me to observe how they all salute me and pray for me. When the Vizier sees me, he must rise in all humility and seat me in his own place, while he sits below me, out of respect for so wealthy a son-in-law. I will order my servants to give him not one purse, but two, that he may know my manly spirit and excessive generosity, and he will understand that the world is contemptible in my eyes.

"I will barely answer him when he speaks to me," continued El Feshshar, becoming wiser and more far-seeing as he pondered. "And when my wife comes to me in my magnificent house, she must stand before me and wait for my commands, and I will not look at her because of the haughtiness of my spirit and the gravity of my wisdom.

"Then all the slaves will prostrate themselves before me and pray to me: 'Oh, our master and lord, may we be thy sacrifice This thy wife awaiteth thy kind regard. Graciously bestow on her one glance.'

"I will give her one glance and one only, so that she may learn that verily I am one of proud spirit. And I will wait till her mother comes to kiss my hand and pray to me to cast the eye of mercy on her daughter.

"But I will return her no answer. Rather will I sit with averted countenance. Then they will all weep and wail and cast themselves down before me. And her mother will kiss my feet and exclaim: 'Oh, my master! If my daughter experience from thee repugnance, her heart will break. Incline to her, therefore, and calm her mind.'

El Feshshar Kicks, but Not the Vizier's Lovely Daughter.

EL FESHSHAR cast his glance toward the sky that he might enrich his thoughts with further designs to be carried out when his vast wealth had thus made him a Sultan of the age.

"Ah!" he said. "They will have to taste the savour of more humiliation before I show them the kindness for which they weep. I will look at them only through the corner of my eye and thus I will sit till my wife, bowed with woe, approaches me with a cup of wine and kneeling, offers it to my lips. And she must say: 'Verily, I am thy slave.' But shall I drink it, even then? That would be to cheapen my favors.

"Nay!" said El Feshshar, furling his eyebrows. "I shall still refuse to be kind to her, for she must learn that there is none whose favor is so difficult to win and so precious to obtain. Therefore, when she holds the cup to my lips and prays to me to drink from it, I shall start up"—and El Feshshar did so—"and I shall shake my hand in her face. Nay! I will not merely shake my hand at her. I will lift my foot and spurn her!"

And with that happy thought cheering his wise and farseeing mind, El Feshshar thrust out his foot mightily.

Alas! His thrice unhappy foot did not kick the Vizier's beautiful daughter. It administered a fatal kick to the precious basket, a kick so well delivered that the basket turned over thrice and caused heads to peer from all the bazars to behold what made such a pleasant tinkle of breaking glass.

Nothing escaped. And the Vizier's beautiful daughter, who came riding by just then on a milk-white mule apparelled with a saddle of gold-embroidered silk, stopped to behold with amusement how El Feshshar slapped his face and rent his garments as he wailed and cried: "Ah! Oh! Ah! Oh! My grief! Ah! Oh! Oh!" And she passed on, not knowing what a fortunate escape had been hers.

This tale is one of the humorous six stories of the six brothers of the Barber of Bagdad; and these six stories in turn are part of the cycle of stories told as The Story of the Humpback. They are famous Oriental tales.

Woman, the Human Pinwheel

By Nixola Greely-Smith.

THE measure of human concentration is the measure of human success. That is why men are more successful than women. Every human personality has the same center—its own ego—but the minds of women are centrifugal, tending always to fly off from their central thought, while the minds of men tend always toward the center of their universe—themselves. A man, to be sure, may take little excursions into the realm of emotion, into love, into service for others, but he always has his return ticket in his pocket. He is always perfectly certain of getting back to the center of his thoughts and energies—himself.

CHARLES DARWIN recognized this difference in men and women when he wrote in "The Descent of Man" that when a man and woman possessing every mental quality in the same perfection are put in competition the man will gain the victory because he will possess higher energy, perseverance and courage—qualities developed in him by the age-long struggle for existence and the necessity for protecting his family from rival males.

John Stuart Mill remarked in "The Subjection of Women:" The things in which man most excels women are those which require most plodding and long hammering at single thoughts"—practically what Darwin said. Darwin believed this higher degree of concentration would always be preserved in men by the struggle to maintain their families. He did not foresee that man would lose in this struggle and that every year more and more millions of women would be forced to maintain themselves and in this struggle must develop the supposedly male qualities of energy, perseverance and power or go under.

Some women cannot develop concentration. By inheritance of ages we are naturally centrifugal, flying off from our central occupation to dig little Johnny out of the marmalade or prevent little Jane from cutting up our best gown to dress her doll. Women have been forced by the nature of their age-long occupation to think scatteringly about many things, to dispense their powers over an infinitude of small things, which left them no energy for great things.

EVERY woman confronted unexpectedly by the necessity for earning her own living experiences at first fear and resentment. She does not know enough to welcome the one chance life offers her to develop the qualities of energy and preseverance and power which Darwin believed to be the exclusive property of the male. Any woman who does develop them has fought not merely her own battle, as a successful man must. She has challenged the ages, has tilted successfully the established order. No woman who fails need be ashamed of her failure. Quite often it is the result of her best qualities, the tenderness and pity which is the most universal expression of the maternal instinct.

On the other hand, there is a type of woman, quite as selfish as the most ruthless man, who fail because of the number of things in which she tries to succeed. She wants to be a business woman, a ballroom queen, a Lady Bountiful and a social uplifter. She is a whirling human pinwheel, sending sparks of energy in all directions, but not accomplishing anything, nor getting anywhere.

She is like a traveler who wants to go to Pittsburg and Portland and Los Angeles all at the same time, and, consequently, she never gets away from the railroad station.

Like the pinwheel, she whirls her little whirl, attracts a little momentary attention by the pretty sparks she sends out, and then falls to the ground, spent and forgotten.

The Story of "Bluebeard."

THE story of Bluebeard originated in France. In the original romance the Chevalier Raoul has a blue beard, from which he gets his name. The incidents are substantially the same as we know them in the familiar nursery tale. "The historic original of Chevalier Raoul would appear to be one Giles de Laval, Lord of Raiz, who was made Marshal of France in 1429, and fought in defense of his country when invaded by the English, but his cruelty and wickedness seem to have eclipsed his bravery, and he is remembered chiefly for his crimes.

He is said to have taken pleasure, among other atrocities, in corrupting young persons of both sexes and afterwards in murdering them for the sake of their blood, which he used in his diabolical incantations. Out of this fact, in itself probably half mythical, the main features of the tale of Bluebeard have probably grown."

How Bessie Saved Bobby

Sandman story of a brave girl who risked her life at a circus when her little cousin fell into the ring where horses were racing.

By Mrs. F. A. Walker.

THE sun was pouring down its beating rays on the circus grounds and about the great white bulging canvas was a shifting crowd of perspiring people, pushing and shoving their way toward the ticket wagon.

In the crowd were Mrs. Burton, little Bobby, who was 5, and Bessie Burton. Bessie Burton was not Mrs. Burton's daughter, but her husband's niece, and, as the girl was an orphan, Mrs. Burton had taken her to live with her in her fine home. Yet it cannot be said she was kind to the child, for, though she gave her plenty of food and clothing, she never seemed to really like Bessie.

Bobby was her one idol. The boy loved Bessie, and that made the mother a bit jealous. In the great house, with its servants and wide halls, the girl felt alone and craved affection, but she met in Mrs. Burton only cold politeness. But today Bessie was happy. Holding Bobby's hand, she wandered about in the crowd, fascinated by the noise, the strange sights and the blaring bands.

Then, when they were seated in the box near the ring, she enjoyed hearing the child scream with delight. The acrobats swung on high, the clowns tumbled around in funny antics, the lemonade boys shouted themselves hoarse, and during it all Bessie and Bobby sat entranced by the music and the display of color.

"Bessie," at length said Mrs. Burton, "I am so tired I think I will go home."

"Oh, no, mamma," pleaded Bobby, who sat with his fist full of popcorn and his fat legs kicking the bench. "I want to see the races—here they come in now to start. See that pretty black horse with the white spot on its forehead. I hope he will win."

TO the shouts of the crowd the racers took their places at one end of the ring. There was a white, a sorrel, a gray and the pretty black, which was ridden by a boy dressed in pink tights. On the lad's head was a crown of silver, and in his hand a long wand. The horse he rode was one of matchless beauty, slender, with a shining coat that seemed to be of satin. As it stepped proudly by the box in which Bobby sat the child clapped his hands in delight, while the boy rider smiled in recognition of the applause. As the horses stood in a row, impatiently pawing the ground, the tent rocked with the shouts of the audience.

The red flag dropped and the horses darted away on their race. But Bessie saw nothing of them flashing by, for her thoughts were busy with her own life. They were reaching back to her own home childhood, when, with her father and mother, her days had been full of happiness, even if her home was not one of wealth. With tears in her eyes she imagined the long years of the future, really alone in life in the midst of splendor, but with no loving heart to cheer her days.

Suddenly there came a roar from the throats of the people about her. Around the course came the racers, stretching their necks and leaping on in great strides, while the tumult of the excited audience rose and fell. The gray was now in front, his eyes gleaming as he sped over the ground. Behind him came the pretty black, with its nostrils wide and his dainty feet fairly flying over the track. Bessie forgot her sorrow and gazed, fascinated at the contest.

BOBBY was so excited that he leaped on the edge of the box and shouted to the boy rider of the black. Onward came the horse, but before it reached the front of the box in which the child had leaped upward, there was a cry, a babyish figure fell forward, then down on the racetrack around the ring and directly in front of the rushing horses. Bessie saw Bobby fall. But before he had touched the ground she had leaped after him. As her feet struck the ground the black swung just in front of her, but with a flash she flung her handkerchief full into his face—the horse swerved and plunged, its rider leaped lightly to the ground, but the animal fell, and as it did so its foot kicked out and struck the girl full on the arm. She fell unconscious to the ground, while Bobby, unhurt, stood and gazed about in amazement.

When Bessie woke up a few hours later in a dainty room in a hospital she found Bobby sitting on the bed and Mrs. Burton bending over her in tears. Gathering the motherless girl into her arms Mrs. Burton poured out her gratitude in a sobbing voice.

"Oh! Bessie," she said, in broken tones, "I have loved Bobby so much that I neglected you. Can you forgive me, dear? In future you must regard me as your mother, and we will try to see how happy we can be all together to make up for the past."

Recipes Worth Trying

Pond Lily Salad—Take 6 hard-boiled eggs, remove the shells, cut around the middle of the eggs and break them apart gently. With a fork scrape the yolk so as to make it mealy, and cut a slice off the end of the egg to make it stand; spread on lettuce leaves and drop a little mayonnaise into lettuce. Then peel 6 or 8 radishes in points, turn back half way and you have pretty pond lily buds, while the eggs make a good imitation of pond lilies. Serve on a looking glass platter and the salad will reflect in the glass.

Orange Pie—Beat yolks of 3 eggs until light and add to them the juice and grated rind of 1 orange, 3-4 cup sugar and tablespoon of corn starch mixed in 1-2 cupful of water. Bake without upper crust, using the whites of the eggs for meringue.

Pickled Peaches—Make a syrup of 4 pounds sugar to 1 part vinegar; 2 tablespoonfuls each of whole clove and stick cinnamon, broken in pieces, tied in a muslin bag and boiled in the vinegar and sugar. Rub the velvet from a peck of peaches and cook a few at a time in the syrup till tender; place them carefully in a stone crock and after boiling the syrup down a little pour it over the peaches and cover. These are delicious with oysters (fried or escalloped) and will keep a year.

Scalloped Apple Pudding—One cup of sugar, ½ teaspoonful of cinnamon, 2 tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, ½ cup of butter, 1½ cups of bread crumbs, 4 cups of sliced apples, ½ cup of water; arrange crumbs and apples in layers in a buttered baking dish, having crumbs on the top layer; sprinkle each layer with cinnamon and dot with butter; add lemon juice and water just before sprinkling on last layer; bake in slow oven 1 hour; serve with sauce.

SEVERE ITCHING OF ECZEMA ON FEET

And Limbs. Impossible to Keep From Scratching. Could Not Sleep at Night. Completely

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"I was afflicted with eczema which began with hot sensations in my feet and limbs, and then followed a rash and itching. The itching was so severe that it was impossible to keep from scratching, and the skin was very much inflamed and red. I could hardly wear my shoes and I could not sleep at night. My clothing aggravated the trouble.

"I got no relief until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used four boxes of Ointment together with the Cuticura Soap and I was healed completely." (Signed) Mrs. C. Carleton, 730 Christiana Ave., Chicago, Ill., Jan. 3, 1916.

RECOVERY OF NEW JERSEY WOMAN

Due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I cannot speak too highly of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for rundown conditions and other ailments. I was very sick and would have terrible pains so that I could hardly take a step. Sometimes I would be so miserable that I could not sweep a room. I doctored part of the time, but felt no change. I later took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and felt a change for the better after the second day. I took it until I was in a good healthy condition. I recommend the Pinkham remedies to all women as I have used them with good results."—MRS. MILFORD T. CUMMINGS, 24 New Street, Bridgeton, N. J.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence of the excellence of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a remedy for the distressing ills of women, such as headaches, backache, nervousness, sleeplessness and kindred ailments.

Just a Wife

(Her Diary)

CHAPTERS FROM A BRIDE'S LIFE STORY

Edited by Janet Treven.

CHAPTER XLVII.

SEPT. 25.—As I was dressing to go out for a walk at half-past four this afternoon Bertha brought me Mr. Soames' card.

I looked at it with considerable surprise, and then I remembered that he had begged permission to call and discuss my success in rescuing Mrs. Soames from the toils of the Rahdin. Candidly, I didn't remember that I had accorded him permission to come and see me, for I'm not in the habit of receiving other women's husbands.

"Tell him I'm out," I said to Bertha.

"Oh, I told him you were in, ma'am," she replied.

So I went into the living room, bidding Bertha to serve tea in 10 minutes.

"I came to thank you for keeping your promise," Mr. Soames began almost immediately after shaking hands. "I was afraid that you had forgotten our little talk. But my wife mentioned that she had just taken you to one of the Rahdin's afternoons and that you had not appeared to be favorably impressed."

"Nor was I," I admitted.

A Candid Tete-a-Tete.

MR. SOAMES smiled approvingly, and it occurred to me that he was looking more cheerful than usual. He is tall and rather thin, with graying hair, but an unlined face. I had always thought of him as a serious, almost somber man. But this afternoon his eyes were brilliant. They are large and of that beautiful and unusual shade which is neither blue nor gray nor hazel, but a combination of all three.

"I don't see how any woman can fall for that East Indian nigger's line of bunk," he continued, contemptuously.

"To me he was repulsive," I replied. "But I can understand how a woman who is not happy, who has lost faith in the ordinary human affections and loyalties, might believe—temporarily, at least—that the Rahdin's doctrine of platonic love held healing and solace for her."

"But are your sure you understand"—Mr. Soames was beginning when Bertha brought in the tea.

After he had taken his first sip he leaned back in his chair with a little sigh of content.

"You believe in the home things, don't you, Mrs. Houghton?" he said. "All this is so quiet, so restful, so unusual in an age when women have left the tea table for the suffrage platform. A man with a shrine like this—well, he's a fool if he worships strange gods."

Mr. Soames Speaks Frankly.

I LOOKED at him wonderingly, but he gave me no chance to speak.

"It's been years since I had a home," he went on tensely. "Don't you think I'm criticising my wife, but I've got to the point where I must talk to someone, and you're a sweet, sympathetic soul. You heard her side of the story down there in Maine. I know I acted like a rotter, but I was sorry enough for it, God knows. And it wasn't a continuous performance. As for that one woman—well, women can never understand that there are situations in which the man who resists temptation is more than human.

"Since then I've been treated to recriminations, and, in the last few months to chilly automatic cheerfulness. There have been no children. Perhaps they would have made a difference. The question is, must Celia and I go on like this the rest of our lives?"

I knew that Mr. Soames was throwing aside conventional reserves, but I couldn't feel shocked; I was too sorry.

"Oh. I think things must come right for you!" I cried. "You must be patient and affectionate—and just wait."

"You are right," he said softly. "And you won't desert us, will you? I may come to se you again—my friend, our friend?"

I hesitated only a moment. "Yes," I said.

Then, in a little while, he went away. I cant' help feeling that the situation is a little unusual, but surely it's always right to be kind.

(To Be Continued.)

The Turk and the Crescent.

THE crescent was not originally an emblem of the Turk. It was first used by the primitive Christians of Constantinople and the eastern provinces of the old Roman Empire as an emblem of the growing influence of Christianity. It was not until about the year 1453, after the Turks had overrun Asia Minor and parts of Southern Europe, and had captured Constantinople, that the Turks adopted the crescent as their national emblem.

The Khoran prohibits the use of images and symbols in the religious ceremonies of the strict Turk, or the internal decorations of their temples and mosques, the rule being so strict as not to allow the martial or civic decoration of their greatest Generals or Pashas, successful commanders or other distinguished persons.

The adoption of the crescent by the Turk as a national emblem is an oddity which has, so far, remained unexplained, though there are several legends on the subject.

Household Helps.

IF ink in the ink well gets thick it may be diluted with strong black coffee and give better results than if diluted with water.

To clean marble basins, make a paste of whiting and soft soap and apply it with a soft cloth. Rinse with cold water and rub dry.

To separate egg yolks from the whites, break the eggs into a funnel over a cup. The whites pass through, the yolks remain.

To clean enameled bath tubs, rub with salt, moistened with lemon juice. Then wash with hot water and soap suds. Dry thoroughly.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By Helen Rowland.

CONSIDER the Vanity of Woman, how it leadeth her to folly!

For lo, I have watched her at her work when she seeketh to IMPROVE upon Nature.

Behold, she sitteth down at her dressing table looking like the wrath of heaven.

And when she ariseth she is an Angel straight from Paradise.

She tortureth herself with slow torture and there is nothing which she will not TRY upon herself at least once.

She pulleth out her eyebrows without mercy, saying:

"Go to! Eyebrows are mussy things! Moreover, they are not being WORN this season."

She scaldeth her face with boiling water, she soaketh it with cold cream.

She massageth it until it acheth and her wrists are weary.

She freezeth it with ice.

She "assembleth her complexion" and applyeth it with much skill.

She baketh her head to make it permanently curly.

She electrocuteth her blemishes.

She bindeth herself in steel casings, she shutteth off her breath.

She pincheth her feet into inquisitorial shoes.

She anointeth herself with spikenard and myrrh.

She arrayeth herself in pink tulle though the snow be flying, and swatheth herself in furs though the thermometer pointeth at 90.

And when she hath finished ALL her labors she regardeth herself critically and studieth herself without mercy, saying:

"I WONDER if I shall DO!"

But a Man is wiser in his ways and utterly without Vanity.

Yea, he rusheth home from the ball game and is arrayed for the banquet in 20 minutes.

He plungeth lightly from the bath and runneth the razor over his chin—ONCE.

He whistleth merrily while he runneth the comb through his Top Hair.

He snatcheth up the first clean shirt at hand and donneth the collar at the TOP of the pile.

And lo, when he is arrayed he smileth at his own REFLECTION with joyous approval, saying:

"Well, well! SOME BOY! Eh, what?"

Verily, verily, my Daughter, the Vanity of Woman is deplorable!

But the APLOMB of Man is incomparable.

Yea, Beloved, it is mine admiration and my despair!

For he taketh it for granted that he was made in the Image of the Almighty and therefore CANNOT be improved upon!

THE ORIGIN OF GLASS.

THE earliest record of the existence of glass is found in Egypt during the fifth or sixth dynasty of the Pharaohs, or about 3300 years before the Christian Era, while some well preserved specimens of its fabrication have recently been discovered in the sepulchres of the period of 2500 B. C.

The glass of Egypt was generally opaque, rarely transparent, always colored and used for the making of articles of adornment, such as beads, vases of blue glass with finely chased wavy lines in white, light blue, yellow, black and red. It was not until nearly 2000 years later—or 600 B. C., to be exact—that transparent glass came into use for the manufacture of bottles and goblets. By this time, however, Egyptian glass had been extensively exported to Greece and Italy, the furnaces of Alexandria, under the Ptolemies, producing glass vases of beauteous design.

TO the Phoenicians have many authorities awarded credit for the discovery attributed to the Egyptians, and it is certain that Sidon, the capital of Phoenicia, was at a very early period famous for glassware made by Artas and Irenawus from the sand brought down from Mount Carmel.

Glass ornaments made by the Phoenicians were distributed through Greece and Italy, the beautifully molded Sidonian vases being held in reverential esteem by Rome at the time of the Antonines.

While specimens of Egyptian and Phoenician glass were found in Greece in the time of Herodotus and Aristophanes, it was not until 350 B. C. that its manufacture in the form of engraved stones and cameos became common among the Hellenes, the sphere of Archimedes, for example, being made of this substance.

AMONG the Romans the art of glassmaking does not date earlier than the beginning of the empire, but as far back as 58 B. C. the theaters had been decorated with mirrors and glass plates.

From decaying Rome the manufacture of glass was transferred to Constantinople then, in the seventh century, to Venice, which for many hundred years was to remain the center of the industry the Venetian goblets and drinking cups being exported all over the world.

The year 1673 saw the first manufacture in England of drinking glasses and mirrors at the hands of Venetian artists brought over by the Duke of Buckingham, while in 1771 the first company of British plate glass manufacturers was established at Ravenhead, Lancashire.

In America glass works were established at Jamestown, 1608; at Salem, Mass., 1634, and in New York, 1683. Subsequently works were built in 1780 in New Hampshire, in 1792 at Boston, while plate glass was first made at Pittsburg in 1853.

CARDINALS, PLUS HORNSBY, BATTER MATTY'S HURLERS

Four Singles and a Home Run in in Seventh Net Huggin's Men Five Runs.

By W. J. O'Connor.

One interesting feature of these Cardinals—and we speak of the Cardinals by way of contrast to the Browns—is their ability to unceremoniously start a good, old knock-down-and-drag-out batting rally. They staged just such a riot yesterday.

After Mathewson's reasonless Reds had tied the score in the first portion of the seventh, the Cards came along with four singles and a homee run in their half of the inning, winning the game, 6-1.

All the "inside" baseball this side of Crocker Land is mere spume in the caldron that is fired by rousing base hits. Batting is the attractive feature of baseball and these Cardinals CAN hit. At times there is a woeful waste of hits at Robinson Field; but the fact remains that hits are almost always abundant.

Rogers Hornsby is worth the price of admission, alone. Rogers was called out on strikes by Hank O'Day, in his first trip to the plate yesterday, on a ball that was outside and high. That pèeved the "Milk-fedKid" so he proceeded to lambast Fred Toney—in subsequent trips to the plate—for a double that tore the boards loose in right field, a single over second and another single down the third base line. The latter hit came after two strikes had been called on Hornsby, two were out and runners were nesting on third and second.

This Is the Kind, Bo.

It was a pinch hit, delivered under trying circumstances but a big-league, death-dealing hit for all that. Hornsby hits straight-away like Delahanty, Lajoie, Dode Criss and those other famous fence-busters. He still has a chance to lead the National League this season and if his lame ankle doesn't interfere with his batting he should almost attain the batting crown of the senior organization.

Strictly Entre Nous.

The attendance at yesterday's game was small enough to make the fight for last place, which this series involved, almost strictly confidential with the players. Perfect quiet reigned and everything said on the diamond could be heard in the stand. Especially what Zinn Beck said to Hank O'Day.

It seems that Zinn, who was coaching at third, had one foot fully an inch out of the coacher's box. Hank stopped the game in the first inning and advised Zinn to get inside of bounds.

"Get in there and umpire; don't mind me," said Beck to the dean of umpires.

"Get outa there and get outa there quick!" shouted Hank.

"If you pay attention to your work you wouldn't know whether I was in or out of the box, was Zinn's retort.

"Now you go to the clubhouse!" shouted Hank, who was red around the neck.

Meadows Pitched Fine Game.

Then the game proceeded and the Cards made 15 hits off Toney, who is considered a good pitcher. Meadows held the enemy to four, didn't walk a man and otherwise pitched a swell game. The only alien run developed through Rousch's triple and an infield out. Meadows was never was in trouble. It was just a canter.

That Federal Taint.

The Cincinnati club is carrying nine ex-Federal Leaguers, leading all others in this respect. Rousch, Chase, Knetzer, Schulz, McKechnie, Louden, Huhn, Moseley and Wingo were redeemed from the outlaw circuit. Wingo never played, but he signed with the enemy of organized baseball, so he's tainted just the same. Chase, Rousch, Wingo and McKechnie have made good for Mathewson.

Horseshoe Dugey!

Speaking of persons lucky and unlucky, how about Oscar Dugey of the Phillies, who threatens to share in his third world's series this fall in as many seasons as a big leaguer, without ever having been a regular. He was with Stallings in 1914, then traded to Moran. His share of the big series money has been much more than his salary today. And, officer, he's in again!

WRAY'S COLUMN

Too Much "Safety First."

LIABILITY companies and Freddie Welsh have no monopoly on the watchwords: "Safety first!" From Fielder Jones in the baseball world, to Alfred De Oro, in the billiard realms, the main idea in nearly every sport is defensive, as opposed to aggressive tactics.

Welsh wins his bouts by preventing the other fellow from doing damage, rather than by any he himself inflicts; De Oro, rather than risk leaving the other fellow a chance to score, will play "safety," which gets nothing for the shooter, but prevents the enemy from counting; the manager of our Browns believes in stopping the other fellow, first, with an airtight defense, and then outpointing him by a single tally; even in the football world it is cited that until two years ago the defense was favored at the expense of the attack to a point where scoring was practically nil.

* * *

The whole scheme of things, in the sport world, is to stop the other fellow, first of all; but win if you can, thereafter.

* * *

Too Much Defense Spoils Interest.

THIS fact, in some ways, has proven very detrimental to popular interest in certain pastimes. In fact, it has led to misunderstandings and, occasionally, to disturbances.

The near-riot at Colorado Springs, in which Referee Billy Roche was "boohed" and made a target for cushions, can be directly attributed to Welsh's "safety first" methods.

Welsh, conserving a title that has already netted him $100,000, fought cautiously, going to cover whenever the storm signals were flying, and uncovering only long enough to shoot a few light punches at his more dangerous opponent. Being clever, he blocked off White completely and slightly outpointed him—making a very wretched fight.

Probably he won, but his showing so disappointed ringsiders that they took it out on the referee.

It was not the fight the public expected of a champion, who, they seem to think, ought to be able to show at least 50—50 in defensive and attacking ability.

* * *

New Rules Needed.

THE same thing in other sports disgusts fans just as much. Pitchers' duels, with three and four hits per side, are bores for the most part. Scoreless football games are most unsatisfactory, while the eternal "safety" play that once made billiard games so monotonous has, fortunately, been cut out by rules.

Rules which will open up the defense, or increase the effectiveness of the attack are desirable in several sports, today; and fighting and baseball are two of the most needy.

Welsh, Fielder Jones and other safety first advocates are making a mistake in defensive tactics, we believe. For they displease the public, and the public keeps all sports alive.

Call for Mike Gibbons.

IS Mr. Mike Gibbons in the house? He's wanted over in Australia immediately to accept a $10,000 certified check—and a trimming at the hands of Les Darcy.

Darcy, through W. F. Corbett of the Sydney Referee, has posted a forfeit to fight any man in America, Mike Gibbons preferred, for a $10,000 side stake and a $10,000 purse, which Promoter Snowy Baker of Sydney, Australia, has agreed to donate. Furthermore, two round-trip tickets and training expenses await Mr. Gibbons or whoever pleads guilty to being the best middleweight in this country.

Darcy urges that military service prevents his quitting Australia at this time, so that he can not come over and smoke our rabbits out of their hutches.

Several other lures or baits have been dangled in front of Mike Gibbons who, however, believes that there's no place like home.

Money is no object to the St. Paul wizard, especially when it must be reached over 7000 miles of brine—and the prostrate form of one of the toughest bits of humanity known since Stanley Ketchel passed out.

You can't blame Mike. A title in the hand is worth two in the Australian bush.

Amazing Progress, This.

TWENTY years ago this summer the first revival of the great Olympic games was held in Athens. Germany was to have held this year's quadrennial at Berlin, but the war has wiped out all hope of a resumption of Olympic activities for 10 years.

However, today, at Newark, N. J., an athletic meet will be held that would probably outclass in performance any international meet of past years, in both the number of athletes present and the quality of their performances.

This is the senior United States championships. The full strength of the country will not be present, as many intercollegiate stars are not competing.

But still the athletes of all the world could not put together a team that could approach it in efficiency—nor could they have done so before the war.

* * *

Twenty Years Ago Today.

IF the competition is well balanced today, marks will result that would make the Olympic games of a few years ago look like a grammar-school meet.

Twenty years ago, at Athens, a pole vault of 10 feet 9 3-5 inches won the world's honors. There are men in today's meet who can do 12 feet 8 inches, and who have done it in competition.

In 1896, at Athens, Burke won the 100-meter race in 12 seconds, and the 400-meter race in 54 1-5 seconds; Flack ran the 800 meters in 2 minutes 11 seconds and the 1500 meters in 4 minutes 33 1-5 seconds; the broad-jump winner did only 20 feet 9¾ inches, and 5 feet 11½ inches took the high jump.

Today they should do the 100 yards in 10 seconds or better; the quarter in 47 2-5, if Meredith runs to form; the half in not less than 1:54 and the mile in 4:20. There are several broad jumpers who have done close to 24 feet, and high jumpers who have cleared 6 feet 6 inches.

And it was only twenty years ago that the lowly marks above won world's championships for the American team against the pick of Europe.

Hard to believe, Bo, but it's history.

CITY NET TOURNEY OPENS TODAY; NEW ENTRY RECORD SET

Sixty-Four Players Have Been Nominated to Compete for Title.

The largest of all city tennis championship tournaments (in regard to number of entrants) will be started on the courts of Triple A at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. Sixty-four local men will contest for the singles title and 32 teams have entered the doubles tournament. This number exceeds any entry that has ever been drawn by the annual affair.

There is certain to be a new doubles championship team this year, inasmuch as last year's winners are not entered together. Drummond Jones and Clarence Gamble defeated Taylor Ward and Roland Hoerr for the title last September, but this season Jones and Hoerr have once again allied. Ward has joined forces with Mel Smithers.

A possibility of the tourney is the elimination of Jones and Hoerr before the finals round. This team has always had a monopoly on the two-man title, but in the Central States matches, in July, failed to be militant contenders.

In fact, the two-man matches should bring about quite a lively scramble. Reppert and Gautier, Ward and Smithers, Josties and Drewes, and Oliver and Gamble are all splendid teams and must be recognized.

Rollie Hoerr holds the singles title and Rollie stands in a fair way of retaining it. He was just working up to his regular form in the Central States tourney and unless he has discontinued play during the last month should be in title form. Drummond Jones looked bad in July but has been playing in the East.

Clarence Gamble will make his initial tournament appearance of the season so that little is known of his 1916 form. Guy Oliver has not shown his face on a tourney court in several seasons, but is prepared for a come-back. Triple A Champion Walter Bowman, Walter Crunden, Arthur van Reppert and Taylor Ward will also be in the struggle up to the neck.

All players must report to the Triple A by 2 o'clock or forfeit their match. This action is taken in order that the first round be finished early.

C. A. C. vs. Lorelei.

A dual swimming meet between the tank squads of the Columbian Athletic Club and the Lorelei Natatorium will be held at the Lorelei Natatorium tonight. All standard swimming events, with the exception of the plunge for distance, will be included on the program. The teams are evenly matched and the events should be well contested.

ART THOMAS TO JOIN COACH PAINTER'S STAFF

Artie Thomas, star of the St. Louis University football eleven during the past three years, has been named as the fourth member of the Billiken staff of gridiron coaches. Thomas, as a quarterback, was awarded the trophy as the best back-field man this past season. The award carries with it the distinction of being the most valuable collegiate back in the city.

Thomas will have charge of the freshman forces this season and will also look over the St. Louis University High School team. During the past few years the Billiken scholastic entry was known as Undergrads, with men of the college department on the squad. This year only high-school men will play. Besides Thomas, Artie Zachritz and Johnny Maguire, former Billikens, will assist Head Coach Earl Painter.

JUNIOR ATHLETES BREAK 4 RECORDS; SENIORS ON TODAY

National Track and Field Championships Will Be Decided at Newark, N. J.

TRACK SLOW YESTERDAY

Athletes Could Not Perform Up to Their Best Standards Under Conditions.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 9—America's best athletes were scheduled to compete here today in the program of national championship events, to be held under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union at Weequahic Park.

The flower of the country from Main to California and from Florida to the state of Washington gathered here for these contests.

Four shattered records marked the junior national track and field championships which were held here yesterday.

Neither rain nor hail, nor wind of cyclonic violence could hold in check the execrable conditions they smashed bid for athletic fame and glory. Despite the execrable conditions they smashed four junior marks and equaled another.

What they would have done had the day been normal can only be conjectured.

The four who inscribed their names on the roll of honor were W. P. Howard of Pittsburg A. A., W. J. Rolker of the Irish-American A. C., W. S. Hummell of the Multnomah A. A. of Portland, Ore., and Frank J. Loomis of the Chicago A. A.

Howard broke the record for the quarter-mile, Rolker for the one-mile walk, Hummel for the 440-yard hurdles, and Loomis for the 220-yard low hurdles. Andy Ward of the Chicago A. A. equaled the mark for the 100-yard dash and only the poor conditions prevented him from getting credit for a new mark.

N. Y. A. C. Was Point Winner.

The New York Athletic Club scored an overwhelming victory in the battle for the team championships, piling up a total of 51 points, representing places in nearly all of the 19 events, while the Chicago A. A., the runner-up, made only 20 points, and the Irish-American A. C., the Irish-American A. A. of Boston, and the Boston A. A. tied for third honors at 13 points all.

One of the surprises of the day was the failure of three men from the Pacific Coast to measure up, save in one or two scattered instances, to the reputation they made before coming East. Earl Thompson, the champion hurdler of the coast, showed a flash of his real worth in winning the 120-yard high hurdles in 16 seconds flat, and W. S. Hummell of the Multnomah Club of Portland, ran in sterling form in romping away with the 440-yard hurdles in the record-smashing time of 56 2-5 seconds.

Verle Murray, the low hurdler; Henry Williams, the Spokane sprinting phenomenon, and Fred Watkins, the Los Angeles pole vaulter, failed to live up to their reputed form. Andy Ward, however, confounded his critics by running to a smashing victory in the 100-yard dash in 10 seconds flat, and showing beyond a shadow of doubt that he is one of the most promising sprinters that has been developed in a decade. Ward won by a little more than a yard, with F. Mottley Jr. of the Atlantic H. S. second.

Three of the five watches which timed the race caught Ward in a fraction inside of even time. As the track was heavy from the downpour which had just preceded the race, it seems almost beyond doubt that Ward could have won in 9 4-5s, under normal conditions.

Irwin Mahl, the much heralded sprinter of the Columbian A. C. of St. Louis, failed to qualify for the finals of the 100-yard dash, running second to J. L. Foley of the Boston A. A. in one of the heats. Foley's time was 10 1-5.

Meanix Ought to Be Nervous.

Hummell flashed over the hurdles in the quarter-mile race with blinding speed. His time was nearly 5 seconds within the old mark, and he won with such ease that W. H. Meanix of the Boston A. A., holder of the world's record of 54 3-5s., will have to look to his laurels when he meets the young Oregonian today in the race for the senior title.

Frank Loomis, who set a new junior mark of 25 1-5s. in the low hurdles, indicated that he is already an athlete almost if not quite as formidable as his brother Jo, national 100-yard champion. The younger Loomis outran his field by more than five yards in the final, and the best that Verle Murray, reputed maker of a record of 24 1-5s. on the Coast, less than a fortnight ago, could do, was to take third place.

W. J. Rolker of the Irish-American A. C., took the one-mile walk in the record time of 6 m. 58 1-5s. His opposition was none too good, but he soon distanced all competitors and won a sterling race of his own making. W. Howard of the Pittsburg A. A. smashed the existing record of 50 4-5s. in the 440-yard run by winning in 50 3-5s. His victory was a surprise, but it was none the less decisive.

Horace Holden of the New York A. C., Metropolitan five-mile champion and conqueror of the mighty Kohlemainen, found his match in H. E. Weeks of the Irish-American A. A. of Boston in the five-mile race. Holden ran pluckily, pulling up from a bad third in the last half-mile and battling through the greater part of the last lap with Weeks, only to weaken in the final sprint.

Evans Leads Gardner 3 Up, After 18 Holes Title Play

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 9.—SUPERIOR play on the short holes gave "Chick" Evans, the open champion, a lead of 3 up over Robert Gardner, the national amateur title-holder, at the end of the first 18 holes in the final round for the amateur golf championship of the U. S. today at the Merion Cricket Club.

Evans played all four of the 3 par holes perfectly and won 3 of them. The morning play was marked by brilliant and ragged golf. Evans' card had four sixes on it.

Gardner's putting was not as deadly as on Thursday and Friday. He did not hole a single long putt during the morning. His driving was erratic, but when he hit squarely he outdrove Evans.

More than 4000 golf spectators traveled over the course to watch the match.

Hole by Hole Play.

MORNING ROUND.

Gardner and Evans teed of in the morning round shortly after 10 o'clock. The weather was perfect.

FIRST HOLE, 335 yards, par 4.—Both had long drives. Evans put his second shot 4 feet from the hole and sank the put for a "birdie," or 1 under par. Gardner took 5. His aproach was over and his third left him a seven-foot putt, which he missed. Evans, 3; Gardner, 5. Evans 1 up.

SECOND HOLE, 513 yards, par 5—Both were on in three and tok two putts Halved in five.

THIRD HOLE—427 yards, par 4. Both drove perfect balls 250 yards down the fairaway. Evans played his second into a trap to the left of the green. Gardner was on in two. Evans chipped out of the trap dead to the hole. Gardner's approach putt hit Evans' ball and ran over the hole two. The hole was halved in par 4. Evans 1 up.

FOURTH HOLE, 355 yards, Par four—Evans drove his first out of bounds over a fence on the right. Gardner's drive was 230 yards down the fairway. Evans' second was in the rough. He pitched his third out of the rough and landed it on the green 140 yards away, carrying a bad gulley and a big sand trap in order to get home. Gardner's approach was half-topped and rolled into the pit. His third was just out of the pit, but as Evans' took three putts to Gardner's two, the latter won, 5-6 and match was all square.

Evans Takes the Lead.

FIFTH HOLE, 580 yards—Hitting in a steady headwind, Evans outdrove Gardner, 20 yards. Both had beautiful second shots, just short of the brook guarding the green. Gardner topped his third into the brook and picked out for the loss of a stroke. Evans' approach landed on a fan mound, at the left of the green. Evans overplayed the hole to the edge of the brook. Gardner's fifth was five feet to the left of the hole, while Evans laid his dead. Gardner missed his putt and Evans holed, winning 6—7. Evans 1 up.

SIXTH HOLE, 420 yards, par 4—Both were on the green with two, Evans being 10 feet from the hole, Gardner on the far edge. Evans took three putts, while Gardner was down in two, winning, 4 to 5. Match all square.

SEVENTH HOLE, 195 yards, par 3—Both tee shots were in trouble. Gardner's found a trap and Evans' went into the rough. Evans played out of the trap five feet from the hole and sank his putt. Gardner was 12 feet from the pin and he took two putts. Evans won, 3 to 4, and was 1 up.

EIGHTH HOLE, 350 yards, par 4—They halved the hole in par fours. Gardner's third was dead to the pin from a bad lie in the march. Evans 1 up.

NINTH HOLE, 170 yards, par 3—Gardner sliced his iron into the woods and his second ran over the green into a trap. His third was short and he conceded the hole to Evans, whose second laid beside the cup. Evans 2 up.

The cards:

Morning round, out—

Evans	3	5	4	6	6	5	3	4	3	—39
Gardner	5	5	4	5	7	4	4	4	5	—43

TENTH HOLE, 385 yards, par 4—Gardner's second was trapped. Evans was on the green in three. Gardner's third was 10 feet to the left. Evans took two

WHAT makes you look so blue, so blue?"
Said Rooter-on-Parade.
"It looks as though the Browns were through,"
The Center Fielder said.
"You think the boys are down and out?"
Said Rooter-on-Parade.
"Beyond the shadow of a doubt,"
The Center Fielder said.
"For the pitchers aren't pitching and the batters fail to bat;
Perhaps they'd win the pennant if the game was 'one old cat.'
But it looks like first division, which is not so worse, at that—
And we'll have a celebration in the mornin'."

"What seems to all those sons-of-guns?"
Said Rooter-on-Parade.
"They fail to score sufficient runs,"
The Center Fielder said.
"But how do you account for that?"
Said Rooter-on-Parade.
"It shows a weakness with the bat,"
The Center Fielder said.
"But the team is nicely balanced and they only need a punch
To make a pennant winner out of Fielder's fading bunch;
He'll get a clean-up hitter and I have a sort of hunch
We'll have winning game for breakfast every mornin'."

Mistaken Identity.

BY the time the Robins had finished wiping up the base lines with the Braves in a double-header, Stallings must have thought he had flushed a covey of game roosters by mistake.

Slim Chance.

THE Mackerels gained a little on the leaders yesterday by beating the Yanks and are now only 46 games out of first place. However, as there are only about 20 more games to be played, the pennant prospects for the Mackmen are not considered rosy.

The Browns have a new catcher named Ray Kennedy who resembles Ray Schalk. Looks like first division.

The field in the national golf championship has narrowed down to two champs, Evans and Gardner. Looks like some golf champ will get his today.

Consolation.

We may not get to Pennantville,
Our pennant hopes are blasted;
But still we had a dandy thrill
That tickled, while it lasted.

BUSH ASSAILS ADMINISTRATION FOR 8-HOUR LAW

Tells Railway Club Not to Return Men to Washington Who Do Not Protect Their Interests.

Benjamin F. Bush, receiver for the Missouri Pacific-Iron Mountain System, speaking last night before the St. Louis Railway Club at the Annex Hotel, declared his opposition toward the national administration because of the passage of the eight-hour bill which averted a national railway strike.

"I do not ask you to vote the Republican or Democratic ticket at the coming election, but you should not return to Washington the men who do not look after your interests," Bush said.

This direct opposition to the administration came near the conclusion of the address which had been devoted to a review of the negotiations of railway heads and the heads of the four railway brotherhoods, and was a divergence from his set speech, which he read from manuscript.

Assails the Administration.

Bush assailed the administration, though he did not mention President Wilson by name, for taking a hand in the strike negotiations, urging that a settlement should have been reached only by arbitration.

"What right has the White House to settle this question?" he demanded. "These economic questions only can be settled by arbitration. It is not the intent of the railroads to accept this new eight-hour law unless it is sustained by the court of last resort."

Reviewing many of the arguments advanced by the railroads during the negotiations with the brotherhoods, Bush said the members of the brotherhoods were the best paid of railway employes and that the nation was seriously menaced when Congress and the President are "by threats of any body of workers, prevented from discharging their duty to all, and are coerced in their legislative action without proper deliberation or investigation of the merits of the question at issue."

"The excessive demands of the men for an eight-hour day with pay the same as they are now receiving for 10 hours' work, and payment for an hour and a half of service for every extra hour, were patiently and thoroughly canvassed by the managers, and it was demonstrated beyond a doubt that a compliance with them in the increased expenditures would work bankruptcy and ruin to the railroad properties throughout the country," Bush declared. "Notwithstanding this, however, the railroads were willing to submit the question to arbitration in the hope, of course, that they would be permitted to increase their rates if the demands of the men were allowed.

"The eight-hour day with overtime as demanded has been estimated to cost the railroads $100,000,000, but if they yielded to the demand from this small percentage of their employes they would in all likelihood have a like demand made upon them by the others, and the increased cost would probably reach nearly $300,000,000 per year. This sum would approximate 4 per cent on the capital stock of all the railroads in the United States.

"Such an amount could not be made up by an increase in rates without a determined opposition on the part of manufacturers, shippers and consumers, and we know that their hostile influence in the past has operated to prevent much needed increases.

"The strike has been averted for the time being by the action of Congress, but as the country may be menaced at any time by a similar crisis, legislation should be enacted that will forever make it practically impossible for the nation's welfare to be jeopardized in any such manner.

"The people of this country should appreciate the firm stand taken by the railroads in upholding the principle of arbitration. If this principle is not held steadfast and allowed to govern in the settlement of differences that may arise between labor and those who provide the means for its employment, then destruction and anarchy, with their attendant horrors, are liable to run riot in the industrial and commercial affairs of our country."

READING RESUMES STOCKS LEADERSHIP REACHES TOP LEVEL

Shipping Shares Also Conspicuous Feature of Active List—Steel Stocks Advance.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"The week ended with speculative activity at its height, and conducted on the same lines as that of the several preceding days. In a number of industrial shares, especially those which have figured in previous Stock Exchange demonstrations of the sort, prices were bid up violently under what appeared to be concerted manipulation. United States Steel shares rose above par again and crossed its previous high-record price.

"The market of the day was not influenced by anything in the news; there was, in fact, no news with a bearing on finance, except the record of August bank clearings in the United States, which rose 38 per cent above last year, and the compilation of net railway earnings for the first half of the year, showing an increase of 42 per cent over the similar period in 1915.

Strain for Explanation.

"In some quarters of Wall street it was pretended that the result of next Monday's Maine election was being discounted. This explanation, however, must have been offered merely in default of anything better, since even the politicians do not profess to know what Maine will do, and since precedent shows its action in September to be of very negligible value as a forecast of the November presidential vote.

"The possible sidelight on the market of the week, so far as concerns the timeliness of just such a demonstration, was provided in the bank statement, which showed the surplus reserve to have been brought down $24,000,000. The resultant figure, $49,800,000, represents a decline of $57,000,000 in three weeks. Except for a temporary dip at the end of May, and again at the beginning of July, it is the lowest surplus since the war began. Whether the gold imports will bring it up again remains to be seen. The loss in surplus was due to $40,400,000 decrease of cash in banks' own vaults, presumably a result of payments against the British credit.

No marked effect of the Government's crop report, featured by estimated sharp decreases in grain yields, was apparent at the opening. It was perhaps under this influence, however, that rails did not maintain the positively strong tone so manifest the past two days. Most of them active promptly at the start were above the closing quotations yesterday, but to the extent of moderate fractions only. Canadian Pacific was a large fraction lower. Reading, which had stood at the head of the recently advancing rails list, was up but ¼ point and below its maximum high yesterday.

Industrials and Coppers.

Industrials and coppers were strongest in the initial trading, Steel common again selling above par. This was upon the known fact that the monthly report of its unfilled tonnage, to be published today, would show a substantial increase and that the corporation's foreign orders were continuing on a large scale covering a long period of delivery.

Reading and shipping shares took the lead shortly after the start, the former making the new high quotation for the year of 112⅜, with gains of 1 to 1¾ points in Marine common and preferred, respectively, while Atlantic Gulf & West Indies made a new record at 79½. Other rails moved forward with Reading, notably Union Pacific, Lehigh Valley, Chesapeake & Ohio and Baltimore & Ohio. Coppers and zinc issues were well represented in the movement, and several paper stocks supplemented recent gains, likewise the Mexicans, United States Steel and Lackawanna Steel rose substantial fractions.

Wagner Electric shares reversed their recent course on the St. Louis Stock Exchange today, selling off $1 a share, to $335, and there was a liberal volume of sales at the lower figure, that issue, in fact, being the most active at the closing session for the week. Transactions were in notably greater volume and of a wider range, and with the exception of the Electric leader and Bank of Commerce, which sold off 50 cents, showed conspicuous firmness, with a well-defined advancing tendency. Candy common cut a striking figure; sales of that stock being comparatively large and 1½ points above its previous sale figure. State National Bank shares were in good demand at an advance of $2, and Independent Brewing first preferred had an advance of half a point. The remainder of the active list was without change.

HORSES AND MULES.

(Reported for the Post-Dispatch by Campbell & Reed and Western Sale Stables Co.)

ST. LOUIS NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, Sept. 9.—The English want all the horses we can furnish. They will buy thick-made cobs 14.3 hands and up, for which we will pay $140. They will buy strong-made cavalry horses 15.1 hands and up, for which we will pay $175. They will buy artillery horses 15.1 hands and up, weighing from 1200 to 1400 pounds, for which we will pay $190. They will buy artillery horses of a minimum weight of 1400 pounds, for which we will pay $205. Their inspection is reasonable, but they will not accept horses with side bones, curby or rounding hocks or horses that brush their ankles in front or behind; ages 6 to 10 years. They will not accept light gray horses.

The Belgians want horses for which we will pay $115 for cavalry and $135 for artillery.

The French want all the artillery horses we can furnish, for which we will pay $160.

Italian inspection started today and shippers who had horses in were well satisfied. The classification, however, was not what we expected, and we have found it necessary to change the prices in order to avoid confusion. There will only be two classes hereafter and the price will be for single A, $150, and for heavy horses, $165, irrespective of age, but we must have at least 50 per cent full-aged horses. We want all of these horses that we can get for the next 30 or 40 days.

The supply of market horses has been very light this week, and we have had a heavier demand for Southern horses than we have had at any time this season.

MULES—We had a fair run of mules this week. Good war mules sold all right, as well as extra good big mules. We sold a load of extra good sugar mules for $267.50 around. We also had quite a few cotton feeders and they sold, but not very high. Do not ship any plugs.

More than 2c per bushel was stripped from the imposing advance made by wheat during the preceding days of the week on the St. Louis Merchants' Exchange today. September was sold down 2¼c and December and May 2⅜c each. The course taken by the market was a reflection of trading sentiment as readjusted under the Bureau's September report given out yesterday. Corn likewise suffered from this modification of bullish sentiment, September dropping 2c, December 1¾c and May 1⅞c. Oats declined fractionally as a sympathetic movement.

Sleeping over the wheat situation in its general aspect, many of the speculators who took on a load of long stuff yesterday, in anticipation of a bullish bureau report, evidently became nervous and there was selling to a sharp decline at the outset. The report was sufficiently bullish to satisfy the most confirmed speculator on that side, but there remain the factors of the heavy carry-over from the last crop and large surplus supplies in Argentina, Russia and other producing countries, from some of which shipments already are moving in increasing volume, with probability that the Russian surplus will come out before very long. Altogether, the prospect was not so glowingly bright as it had been before the Government report, hence the eagerness to get away from the commitments at the level to which they were speedily lifted shortly before the close yesterday. There was some buying on the break of more than a cent, but values were not greatly improved during the first hour.

The report on corn was not so strikingly bullish as in wheat. Traders had anticipated a greater loss in prospective yield than was actually shown, improvement appearing in crops in more than one of the important states.

Bulls Claim Over-Estimate.

In both wheat and corn the confirmed bull was inclined to ridicule the bureau's estimates as much greater than would be realized in harvest returns.

Beginning today, there is no Federal revenue tax to be paid on speculative grain sale contracts.

Broomhall cabled that the Liverpool wheat market opened firm, influenced by America, but later eased on expectations of larger shipments. Spot market firm, with demand quiet. Strike prospects are unfavorable and expectations are for large shipments to the United Kingdom, with India and Australia offering more freely and shipping noticeably increased from these centers, with prospects of enlarged shipments next week, these helped to check bullishness. Millers' demand quiet. The speculative corn market was steady, with better demand for spot.

Receipts of wheat at St. Louis for the day totaled 107,985 bushels, against 147,600 on the corresponding day last year; corn, 24,000 bushels, compared with 13,200 a year ago; oats, 51,000 bushels, against 74,800; hay, 465 tons, compared with 720 last year.

Arrivals reported by Minneapolis were 325 cars, against 244 on the corresponding date last year and 644 two years ago; by Duluth, 166 cars, against 123 last year and 502 two years ago; by Winnipeg, 315 cars, compared with 340 two years ago.

Clearances of wheat and flour were 1,366,000 bushels, against 1,103,000 last week; corn, 91,000 bushels, with none last week; oats, 305,000 bushels, against 464,000 last week.

Snow on Bureau Report.

B. W. Snow gave out a statement that "the Government report fully confirms the substantial failures of the spring wheat crop of the Northwest. It makes the crop of Minnesota and Dakotas only 91,000,000 bushels, against 285,000,000 last year, and compares with my estimate of 89,000,000 for the three states on Aug. 16. From this Northwest crop, after deducting about 20,000,000 bushels of durum wheat and the 22,000,000 required for seed, there is left a total available supply of spring wheat proper of 49,000,000 bushels. The food requirements of the population of three states for a year equal about 21,000,000, so the surplus production of spring wheat this year in three states is only about 28,000,000 bushels, against 222,000,000 last year. This is subject to further shrinkage when the deficiency in flour-making value on account of light weight is given consideration. The milling capacity of Minneapolis is above 80,000,000 bushels per annum, and country mills of three states require above 75,000,000 more. No such situation has ever been known in the Northwest, and the crop failure there must change the whole current of wheat."

Sagging Day at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—Wheat showed weakness today largely because of a bearish construction which many traders placed on the Government crop report. It was contended that the figures did not fully confirm extreme low estimates of some of the leading crop specialists. Uncertainty over Balkan war developments tended also to handicap the bulls. Realizing sales to make trades even for the week-end led afterward to further declines. The close was unsettled, 2⅝c to 2⅞c net lower.

Free offerings by holders weakened the corn market. The main incentive to sell was the fact that predictions had been excessively bullish as to the Government crop estimate. No important rallies took place. The close was nervous at 1½c to 2c net decline.

In oats, as in corn, the Washington crop report had a bearish influence. On the dip, however, leading houses were good buyers.

Provisions averaged lower on account of lack of support. Hogs promised to be a little more plentiful next week than at the corresponding time last year.

SELLING WAVE HITS COTTON LATE AND NET LOSSES RESULT

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 1 to 8 points, and sold about 14 to 16 points net higher during the early trading on a renewal of yesterday's covering movement and trade buying. Reports that very few selling orders were being received from the South doubtless encouraged local buying on the advance to 15.40c for December and 15.51c for January. New England spinners were reported to be buying here to fix prices, while several private advices were received from the South claiming that farmers were not offering cotton as freely at the lower level.

Realizing developed around 15.51c for January and the market broke very sharply in the late trading under a renewal of southern selling and local liquidation promoted by weakness in New Orleans. December broke from 15.43 to 15.14c, while January sold off to 15.21c, and the close was irregular at a net decline of 10 to 17 points.

Cotton futures closed easy: Oct., 14.96c; Dec., 15.18c; Jan., 15.21c; March, 15.36c; May, 15.60c.

Spot cotton steady; good middling upland, 15.30c. No sales.

Holiday in Cotton at Liverpool.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 9.—The Cotton Exchange is closed today, it being a holiday.

"PHYSICS AND CHEMISTRY FOR NURSES."

THE profession of nursing is rapidly rising in dignity and learning. The time is coming when the nurse will be required to have almost the knowledge of a doctor to get a license, for the nurse is, in truth, the guardian of the life of the patient, and is required to act in emergencies when error may be fatal. Particularly essential to nurses is a knowledge of chemistry and physics, and Amy Elizabeth Pope has endeavored to put into one volume the essentials that are required. In doing so she not only has created a good book for nurses, but one that every housewife would find useful. The chemistry of cooking and keeping cooking utensils in proper order would be useful in any kitchen. (Putnam.)

"WILD ANIMAL WAYS."

ERNEST THOMPSON SETON is at his best in "Wild Animal Ways." In the course of his studies of the natures and habit of such animals, he has been impressed here and there with the individuality of a bear, a fox, a wild horse or other creatures of the plains or forests, and he has gathered in this volume the stories of each of these. Each is told as though it were the biography of a man or a woman. It is a book primarily for the youthful mind but anyone will have a better appreciation of animal nature and resource after reading it. (Doubleday, Page & Co.)

"A SOUTHERN ROMANCE."

IN "Chloe Malone," a recently published novel by Fannie Heaslip Lea, there is a delightful romance in the brief part of Chloe Malone's career which the reader is permitted to know. The scene of this charming bit of fiction is laid in New Orleans and the author has given to her characters a spice and animation that are unusual.

In the opening scenes while Chloe and her mother are on their way to the opera, which is the debutante evening for Chloe, there is an adventure which changes the entire course of Chloe's life, although at the time she does not realize that such will be the case. Chloe and her mother are poor, but in former times had been wealthy and had belonged to the society of New Orleans. Into this society Mrs. Malone was endeavoring to introduce her daughter, and it was the sale of many old family heorliims that enabled Chloe to dress in the proper mode for the debutante party.

At the debutante party Chloe met the most wealthy eligible young man in the city. He fell in love with her, and in order that Mrs. Malone may have some of the luxuries that she has been denied during the large part of her life, Chloe becomes engaged to the wealthy young man. Then the adventure which she encountered on the way to the party is encountered and there are some interesting paragraphs as the author permits the reader to watch the gradual changing of the character in Chloe; but to learn what that is all about one had better read the story. SOME are judiciously silent; some are afraid to open their mouths; others keep still because they haven't anything to say and wouldn't know how to say it if they had. Each, in his way, is wise.

A Modern Villain.

THROUGH the shrubbery Marcus Pelf, the wealthy rejected suitor, watched Harry Harrison, the village blacksmith, clasp Ruth Roberts in his strong, young arms.

"Curse 'em!" he hissed. "I'll have my revenge! I'll buy 'em an automobile for a wedding present, and then look on gloatingly while they mortgage the blacksmith shop to buy gasoline!"

Where He Goes Lame.

OMAR: Bright is a man who usually knows what he is talking about.

Heiny: Yes; but there is one drawback.

Omar: What's that?

Heiny: He never knows when to quit talking about it.

Often Enough.

THAT'S a fine lawn you've got there. How often do you have to mow it?"

"Whenever my wife tells me to."

Realistic.

THIS new novel of mine," said the author proudly, "is a first-hand study of life in the underworld. I went down into the slums and associated with the most desperate and depraved criminals, in order to get material for it."

"All I've got to say about it," remarked the publisher, "is that you got some pretty raw material."

THE meek will inherit the earth, so it is said. Up to the present none has been seen to "cash in" on any part of the prophecy.

You Know the Sort.

HOW often you hear men say: 'If I had $1,000,000 I would be satisfied.'"

"Yes; and it's surprising the amount of mental concentration fellows of that sort can bring to bear on borrowing a quarter."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Ready! Fire!

WHERE are you going with that trombone, old man?"

"I'm going to take it home and practice on it. My next door neighbor is learning to play the cornet."

"I see. You're going to play duets."

"No; duels."

Served Him Right.

WHAT became of that red-headed stenographer you used to have?"

"She married my bookkeeper."

"Did you approve the match?"

"Certainly. I never did like that bookkeeper, anyhow."

NEARLY every woman is wise enough to see through a man—and fool enough to let him know it.

Bad Luck Unawares.

ENGLISH soldier (who has had the mirror of his trench periscope broken by a German sniper's bullet): Look at that, now. There's seven years' bad luck for some bloomin' Boche, and the blighter doesn't even know it.—Sketch.

Inopportune.

SOME of the girls on the border are feeding the soldiers," said the hotel clerk.

"Cut out that talk," said the proprietor. "Do you want to make the girls around here discontented?"

Time Enough Yet.

WOMAN is a little slow to get acquainted with the auto apparently."

"What makes you say that?"

"I have never seen one repairing her car with a hairpin as yet."

THE worst thing about egotism is there are so many brands of it.

Cause for Worry.

WILLIS: Bump borrows trouble.

Gillis: What is his latest cause for worrying?

Willis: He wants to know, in case nobody should vote this fall, who would be elected.

Lost by the Wayside.

Lucile Buys Stock in a New Submarine.

By BIDE DUDLEY.

"WE had an inventor in here a while ago," said Lucile, the waitress, to the friendly customer, as the latter unfolded his napkin. "I wish you could a-seen him."

"What was the matter with him?" he asked.

"Oh, nothing much, except that he was sort o' crazy and wanted to talk to the seclusion of everything else. When I seek him out to have him choose his poison, he shows an inclemency to get gabby. 'Listen, girlie!' he saws. 'I'm working on a submarine.'

"What are you—a deck hand?" I ask.

" 'No, no!' he exprosolites, shaking his head and frowning. 'I'm an inventor. I'm making a new kind of underseas boat. The speed is the hard thing to get. I want mine to go 26 knots an hour.'

" 'Oh, I see,' I hand him. 'You're working on a knotty problem.'

" 'Yes,' he says. Then he gets me. 'No,' he adds. 'I'm serious about it. I want my boat to be fast.'

' 'Tie it up to the levee and it will be fast,' I tell him. He didn't like that.

" 'Can't you be serious a minute?' he asks.

"'No,' I says. 'I'm always the happy little person you see me now—free from care and flitting about from victim to victim.' Then I frown. 'But,' I says. 'I don't want to be ex post-factory about it, but did you come in here to invent a substitute marine boat or will you have your eggs fried?'

"Well, you know that got him. He looks at me and shakes his head. 'You're a bird,' he says. 'I see it's no use to try to explain anything to you. Bring me two fried eggs, a cup of Java and a collection of toast.'

"I haste away and soon return with the kitchen fruit. He mutilates the eggs a bit and begins to recover his reposure. 'Say,' he says, 'how would you like to have some stock in my boat?'

" 'What kind of stock—horses or cattle?' I ask. Now, you know and I know that I was fully cognificant that he didn't mean live stock. But I just couldn't resist the faux pas. He explains that there ain't any room on the boat for live stock. Then he pulls out some printed papers and says each one is a hundred shares in his boat company. He says when the boats get going the papers will be worth $10,000 apiece. I'm going to sell you a hundred shares for a five spot,' he says, 'just because I like you. You got pretty eyes and you're witty.'

"Then I go after him right. 'Listen,' I tell him. 'You come in here to eat, didn't you?' He says he hid. 'Then,' I tell him, 'give the teeth free rein and peddle the stock outside.' What do you think of that guy, anyway?'

"Oh, he's probably a get-rich-quick fakir."

Lucile took a folded printed slip from her pocket. "I guess you're right," she said. "Still if our U-boats get to going good I may be able to retire and have a whole revenue of servants. It only cost me $4. I got him down one plunk. And," concluded Lucile, "that guy thought he was so shrewd, too."

Getting and Earning.

SUITOR: So you told your father that I was earning $4000 a year. What did he say?

The Girl: He said he knew you were getting that much, but he doubted you were earning it.

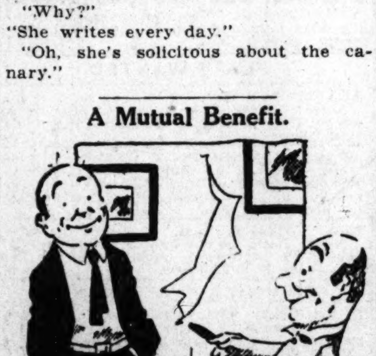
YOUR wife must be very solicitous about you."

"Why?"

"She writes every day."

"Oh, she's solicitous about the canary."

A Mutual Benefit.



"Why do you send your wife and daughters to the seashore while you stay at home?"

"We're all more comfortable. Mother and the girls hate to see me in a wilted collar and I'm very much annoyed by their bathing suits."
